BE CAREFUL!
This is an injunction of national importance at the present time. Apart, however, from the need of the observance of carefulness for the well-being of the nation—it is certain that the cultivation of this quality always brings substantial rewards in every department of life. Careful people avoid much inconvenience and many troubles which beset the path of the heedless. The importance of carefulness in regard to matters concerning the general health will be obvious to all. Careful people keep a watch upon their digestive powers, recognising that any weakening of these is frequently the cause of indisposition and illness. They hold themselves ready and take, when necessary, such a remedy as Beecham's Pills. This is an excellent idea and a wise precaution. A periodical dose of BEECHAM'S PILLS
is a great safeguard. Beecham's Pills regulate the bowels, give tone to the stomach, correct the action of the liver, restore the appetite, and improve the digestion generally. They have proved of great value to many thousands of people. Beecham's Pills have long years of great success behind them; the alleviation of many illnesses to their credit; in fact a better family medicine is not to be found. They are compounded with great care from vegetable sources remarkable for their curative qualities, and as a digestive tonic and aperient medicine you will find they

McBirney's Great Annual Summer Sale

WILL COMMENCE ON MONDAY.

AN EVENT OF MARKED IMPORTANCE

Passing events induced us to defer this year's Sale to a later period than usual; the interval has given us an opportunity of examining our Stocks more minutely, with the result that we determined to make very SERIOUS REDUCTIONS generally, and particularly in FASHIONABLE SUMMER GOODS, of which we hold immense quantities. The disposal of these having been largely interfered with by unfavourable climatic conditions, and in view of the waning season, A BIG SACRIFICE became necessary in order to clear them.
Customers patronising this Sale may rely on securing genuine Bargains, as all goods are reduced.
Post Orders receive prompt and careful attention.
Carriage is paid on all Cash Orders value 10/- and upwards (except Furniture, Carpets, &c.)

LAW REPORTS.

ACTION FOR DIVORCE.

Yesterday, at Nisi Prius, before Mr. Justice Dodd, sitting without a jury, a petition was heard in which Lilian Margaret Aurora Parker prayed for a decree of divorce a mensa et thoro from her husband, James Matthew Marmaduke Parker, on the ground of misconduct. The respondent did not appear.

Mr. Newett (instructed by Messrs. George D. Fottrell and Sons) appeared for the petitioner, and informed the judge that the parties were married on 17th September, 1898, in the Parish Church of Cocanada, Godaveri district, India. The respondent was then an engineer in the employment of the Government of India. He was born at Kilmacthomas, Co. Waterford, his father being a clergyman in the Church of Ireland. There were two children of the marriage, both girls. Until the spring of 1915 the parties lived happily together. About that period a Mrs. King, with whom they were on friendly terms, came to reside with them as a visitor at their residence at Coimbatore, Madras. Mrs. Parker's suspicions became aroused as to the relations between her husband and Mrs. King. She ultimately charged her husband with having committed adultery with Mrs. King, and he admitted that he had done so. Mrs. Parker told him that she would take proceedings for divorce, and from that forth she ceased to cohabit with him. Proceedings had been taken by the petitioner for restitution of conjugal rights, and a decree had been obtained, but Mr. Parker had not complied with it. The present petition was then filed. On June 15th, 1915, Mrs. Parker sailed from India for England, and when the steamer arrived at Colombo Mrs. King came on board and also travelled to England. On 9th September, 1915, Mrs. Parker wrote to her husband expressing disappointment that he had been unable to obtain leave of absence. At that time the war was in progress, and Mr. Parker had obtained a commission as second lieutenant in the Army Service Corps. She received no answer to that letter. In November of that year Mrs. Parker had reason to believe that her husband was in London, and she also ascertained that Mrs. King was living in a flat at 50 Hogarth road. Accompanied by a private inquiry agent, she visited the flat to inquire for Mr. Parker. They both saw Mrs. King, and learned that Mr. Parker was not in. On 17th November they again visited the flat and saw Mr. Parker there. She put the specific question to her husband whether he was living with Mrs. King as husband and wife, and he admitted that he was. On the following day Mrs. Parker received a letter from her husband, in which he wrote:—"You must clearly understand that Mrs. King cannot see you in our flat on any account. I learn from her that you have been here several times lately making unpleasant scenes. This cannot be allowed again. If you want anything settled or arranged, you must write through your lawyer to me. I will send you the address at once. I have given instructions that you are not to be allowed into the flat." Later Mrs. Parker learned that her husband was living with Mrs. King at the Jermyn Court Hotel, London, and evidence would be produced that they stayed there for several weeks, occupying the same bedroom.

Mrs. Parker, the petitioner; Mr. James Farrelly, manager of the Jermyn Court Hotel, and Mr. James Holder, private inquiry agent, were then examined in support of counsel's statement.

Mr. Justice Dodd said he was satisfied that the respondent's domicile had been sufficiently established as being Ireland, that misconduct had been proved, and that there was no evidence of collusion between the parties. He accordingly granted the decree asked for, with costs.

MIDLETON ESTATE CASE.

Yesterday, in the Court of Appeal, before the Lord Chancellor, Lord Justice Ronan, and Lord Justice Molony, the arguments were resumed in the case of Michael Ryan (tenant), Lord Midleton (landlord). The case came on for hearing on an appeal from the decision of Commissioner the Hon. Gerald Fitzgerald refusing, with costs, a motion made on behalf of the tenant for an order declaring void the notice dated 3rd January, 1916, of intention to sell his holding by the tenant, and also declaring void the notice served by the landlord on the 19th January, 1916, to ascertain the true value of the holding with a view to purchase. The lands are situate at Midleton, Co. Cork.

Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, Mr. Serjeant M'Sweeny, and Mr. J. F. Moriarty (instructed by Mr. T. H. G. Wallace) appeared for the tenant, appellant; and Mr. Fleming, K.C., and Mr. Rearden (instructed by Mr. W. J. Barry) for the landlord, respondent.

Lord Justice Ronan asked Mr. Fleming if Lord Midleton's view was that Ryan should be reinstated in his original position, or whether Lord Midleton insisted upon binding him to the notice which he had served and exercising his right of pre-emption.

Mr. Fleming said Lord Midleton never had any objection to Ryan as tenant.

Lord Justice Ronan said that was not an answer to his question. He wanted a plain answer one way or another.

Mr. Serjeant M'Sweeny said the application of the tenant only asked that the parties should be restored to the status quo ante.

The Lord Chancellor said the motion that the Court was considering was a motion to set aside the landlord's application to have the price fixed at which he was to buy the tenant's holding.

Mr. Fleming said he was not then in a position to answer Lord Justice Ronan's question.

The Court adjourned the further hearing until next Tuesday, in order to give an opportunity of communicating with Lord Midleton and ascertaining his view on the matter.

RULES OF CREAMERY SOCIETIES.

Judgment was delivered yesterday in the King's Bench Division by Mr. Justice Madden and Mr. Justice Pim in the case of the Coolmoyne and Fethard Co-operative Creamery Company v. Bulfin. It came before the Court on a case stated at the Spring Assizes at Clonmel by Mr. Justice Gibson, who heard an appeal brought by the defendant, Mr. Thomas Bulfin, farmer and cattle-dealer, of The Valley, Fethard, from a decision of the County Court Judge at the Cashel Quarter Sessions giving a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for £20 damages for breach of contract by the defendant, a member of the plaintiff company, in not supplying milk to the company as provided by the rules.

Mr. Justice Madden, in giving judgment, held that the rules of the society were not unreasonable, and the decision of the County Court Judge should be affirmed.

Mr. Justice Pim concurred.

Counsel for the plaintiffs—Mr. Carrigan, K.C., and Mr. Sealy (instructed by Mr. C. M. Barry); and for the defendant, Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, Mr. W. G. Gibson, K.C., and Mr. Kinahan (instructed by Mr. G. A. Nolan).

NEW CHURCH TO OUR LADY OF LOURDES,
LOWER GLOUCESTER STREET, DUBLIN.

A temporary edifice has been erected on the site secured for the New Church, which is so badly needed in this locality.

It is already overcrowded, and the Shrine has aroused a deep spirit of devotion to Our Lady of Lourdes, with most beneficial results amongst the people.

The temporary structure must serve until the funds necessary to build a permanent Church to Our Lady of Lourdes are collected. The district is the most densely populated and poorest in the city, and, therefore, little pecuniary aid can be expected from it.

The Administrator strongly appeals to the generosity of the Catholics of Dublin and Ireland to assist him in carrying out the good work.

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass will be offered each week for subscribers.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by any of the Clergy, or by

Questions of Settlement.

The proposed settlement of the Irish question has two features which make it unique in the history of modern, or any, politics. The people whom it is designed to "appease" do not want it, and the country is being kept in complete ignorance of its details. Even the broad outlines are still a subject of controversy; yet if this settlement is going to succeed, it will be thrust upon us soon and suddenly, and its results may be irreparable. If it proves to be a bad settlement, all the authority and wisdom of an Imperial Conference may not be able to undo the mischief wrought by two or three years of confused or unjust government. Unionist Ulster has accepted the settlement, and, so far as we can now judge, seems likely to become reconciled to the knowledge that, technically, it is only provisional. The Nationalist Party has accepted it, and is supporting it with the desperate energy of men whose political lives are at stake. If the Nationalists of Ulster accept Mr. Lloyd George's proposals, it is probable that the southern Nationalists will accept them. Mr. Redmond and Mr. Devlin are making tremendous efforts to secure the assent of Nationalist Ulster, and, in spite of the emphatic hostility of many Nationalist bodies in the six Ulster counties, they may succeed. Their prospects of success will be much improved if they can secure the support of the Roman Catholic Church in the North of Ireland, and Mr. Redmond was in secret conference yesterday with six of the seven Roman Catholic Bishops of the northern dioceses. The peril is imminent, but the Irish public remains ignorant and bewildered. Sir Edward Carson and Mr. Redmond may know the details, but the taxpayers who will have to foot the bill, the minorities in North and South which have some cause to fear political oppression, are still in the dark. No people was ever asked to pass a fuller or more far-reaching vote of confidence in its political leaders. Yet the necessity of the vote, curiously enough, has been brought about by the acknowledged incompetence of those leaders.

The position of the Unionists of the three southern provinces must give the most optimistic among them cause for grave anxiety. We should have fewer fears for their future if the Irish question were now being settled at a conference of representative Irishmen of all parties. The southern Unionists are a national asset. They are a substantial minority of the people; they control much wealth and industry; their Imperial and national patriotism was never in doubt. The things which they could bring into the common stock are many and valuable. In an All-Ireland Conference for the reconstruction of Irish government they would be respected and important parties to any national contract. They would ask, and might expect to receive, fair, and even generous, terms as the price of their good-will. This would be their position in any proper negotiations for settlement under the auspices of an Imperial Conference at the end of the war. The position into which they have been thrust, or manœuvred, under the present scheme is anomalous, unnecessary, and unjust. They have not been permitted, so far as we know, to make any sort of bargain with the Government or with the Nationalist majority in Ireland. Nobody seems to be able to say—nobody, at this eleventh hour, is empowered to say—what safeguards, if any, the scheme contains for the Unionists of the south and west. The Nationalists of Ulster will have the protection of eighty Nationalist members in the Imperial Parliament. What protection does the scheme furnish in either the Imperial or the Irish Parliament for the Unionists of the south and west? Are any seats to be allotted to southern Unionists in the Irish Parliament, and, if so, how many? If Mr. Lloyd George proposes a settlement that will be just and reasonable in the case of southern Unionists, why has he thrown a veil of silence and mystery over the whole business? The conduct of these negotiations compels us to believe that he regards southern Unionists as a wholly negligible item, and that, if, and when, his settlement becomes law, they will find themselves without protection or safeguards of any sort. We fear the worst from negotiations which have been removed deliberately and carefully from the light of day.

We may be sure that in his conference with the Roman Catholic Bishops yesterday Mr. Redmond laboured to satisfy them that adequate safeguards have been provided for the interests of their Church in Unionist Ulster. He is well aware that, without the assurance of such safeguards, the Roman Catholic Church in Ireland would throw its whole influence against the scheme. The General Synod of the Church of Ireland will be held next week in Dublin. Has Mr. Lloyd George satisfied the Bishops of that Church that his settlement makes any provision for her interests? We have always disliked interference by the Church in politics, and everybody can now see that the identification of the Church in Ulster with the Ulster Covenant has been bad for the Church as a whole. Mr. Lloyd George's scheme, however, raises for the Church of Ireland important questions of administration which are in no way concerned with politics. The political wedge which the settlement would drive between the northern and southern dioceses must create a variety of awkward problems. More than one diocese will have to divide its allegiance between Westminster and the Parliament at Dublin. This may involve an almost hopeless confusion in questions of Church finance and in the immensely important department of primary education. Such matters will constitute a perfectly proper subject of debate for the General Synod. It is the chief guardian of the Church's interests, and we hope that it will not forget its high responsibility in the present crisis. The Synod is entitled to ask what safeguards Mr. Lloyd George's scheme provides for the Church of Ireland minority outside Ulster. If such safeguards have been formulated, they ought to be made public, and the Church's right to say whether they are adequate or inadequate ought to be fully recognised. No British Government, labouring under whatever stress of Imperial necessity, is entitled to thrust an unknown settlement upon a large and important body of Irishmen, with the simple words, "You must take it." We make this protest in the interest not only of southern Unionists, but of the whole country. A settlement which is unfair and bad for any section of the Irish people must be a bad settlement for all classes of Irishmen. No temporary settlement that is not based on general consent can hope to smooth the way for the work of an Imperial Conference. On the contrary, it must complicate the difficulties of a real and permanent settlement with a new crop of Irish problems. The present conspiracy of silence is of the worst omen for the peace of Ireland.

The Indian Frontier.

A new theatre of military operations has come into view with the appearance of a British force, under General Sir Percy Sykes, in Southern Persia. This force has lately entered Kerman, an important provincial capital some two hundred and fifty miles from the port of Bunder Abbas on the Persian Gulf, and has been cordially received by the local officials and people. The Kerman district is widely removed from the scene of British operations in Mesopotamia and Russian operations in Kurdistan. Sir Percy Sykes's force in this district is charged with a distinct mission, which, it is understood, has been undertaken by arrangement with the Persian Government. In the first place, it is intended to assist the Persian Government in restoring order in the southern part of the country, and especially in the British "sphere of influence," on the western border region of which Kerman lies. Into this district retired a considerable part of the mixed bands of irregulars who were driven out of the Russian "sphere of action" by the vigorous advance of the Russians from the north. In the next place, the force is intended to prevent the continued passage of German and Turkish agents who, since the beginning of the war, have been trying to foment trouble in Afghanistan and on the Indian frontier. The project of a tribal invasion of India was one of the most important of the motives which influenced Germany in striking the blow in the Balkans that established direct communication between the Central Empires and Turkey. The design has hitherto proved futile in consequence largely of the loyalty of the Amir of Afghanistan to his engagements with the Government of India. He had employed Turkish officers for the instruction of his Army, and with the outbreak of war more Turkish officers appeared in his country. The Kaiser wrote personally to the Amir urging him to proclaim a "holy war." Instead of rousing them against Great Britain, however, the Amir actively discouraged the Afghans and the surrounding tribesmen from any act of hostility, and imposed upon his Governors an attitude of strict neutrality. His influence succeeded in restraining the tribesmen in the earlier days of the war, when India was not so well prepared against the possibility of an invasion from the north-west as she is now. The position in India is now so secure that there has never been a time within the past century when such an enterprise could have been attempted with smaller hope of success. Of late the enemy have redoubled their efforts to create serious trouble on the Indian frontier. Probably the fall of Kut-el-Amara has provided them with a useful opportunity of magnifying our reverses for the benefit of the fanatical element in a renewed attempt to raise a jehad. It is not unlikely that the Amir of Afghanistan has represented to the Government of India that he cannot guarantee the efficacy of his restraining influence unless steps are taken to suppress this propaganda in his country, over wide districts of which his authority is merely nominal. Sir Percy Sykes's mission should close the avenue by which the enemy's agents make their way to Afghanistan. In his operations in Southern Persia he is, in effect, defending the frontier of India.

Art and Opera.

Sir Thomas Beecham, still active in the cause of musical culture in England, has recently held a season of opera for several weeks in Manchester, and has now taken his company to London. When he was in Manchester he complained that the critics were not taking proper notice of the new scenery which he had provided for some of the operas. One newspaper partly met his complaint, and partly rebuked him, by sending to the performances a critic who said nothing about the music, but wrote—as, being a specialist in scenic art, he was well qualified to write—an appreciation of the scenery. Since that incident a good deal of notice has been taken of the scenic element in Sir Thomas Beecham's productions, and artistic people have been wondering how it is that stock scenes and garish or slipshod mounting have for years been thought good enough to accompany great works of music. It was certainly Wagner's idea, when he was raising Opera from the low estate in which he found it, that the highest art should inform the scenic as well as the musical and dramatic elements. As to music and drama, he effected the reforms which he designed, because he was qualified by his knowledge of technique, as well as by his great imaginative powers, to set an example. He was a great composer, and no mean poet. He tried to be also what we now call a producer. In this sphere his conviction bore fruit in his special theatre at Bayreuth. He scoured Germany for a producer whose work should match his own music and poetry. He did not succeed, for artistic expression through the technique of stage production was not contemplated in his day; and, great as he was, he was not so great that his genius and energy could revolutionise scenic art, as well as musical art, in the service of opera. We must, however, honour the prophet in him, who saw that the revolution was needed, and that art must enter into every element of opera. In the meantime, men like Bakst, Reinhardt, and Gordon Craig have worked a revolution in the art of the theatre; and now the time has come when their work fits itself in with the other elements of reformed opera.

The Right Hon. Lord Justice Molony, P.C., K.C., Four Courts, Dublin.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

153 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

Mr Lloyd George is to be the guest of the Irish Club at a house dinner next Friday. By that time it is expected that the fate of his Home Rule proposals will have been settled one way or the other, and also that he will have definitely decided whether or not to accept the War Secretaryship. Both he and Mr. Asquith were present at the War Council to-day, so it is probable that the official announcement will not be long delayed.

People are beginning to wonder what is happening to the Irish Government. Lord Wimborne has never yet withdrawn his resignation, though he is still regarded as Lord Lieutenant. Mr. Birrell's post has never been filled, and, though the War Office is the subject of endless conjecture, no mention is made of Ireland. Appointments to these important posts in Ireland cannot wait indefinitely, for, even if a settlement is quickly arrived at, it will take a considerable time to get it in working order. Some preparation ought to be made against the hour when martial law will be no longer necessary.

According to a Paris paper, the Russians in the Pripet sector are supported by "Belgian armoured motor cars." This must, I think, be a mistake. The Belgians are not likely to have any cars, armoured or otherwise, to lend to their Allies. Those referred to are almost certainly the British cars belonging to the Naval Brigade which were employed in Belgium for a time during the earlier stages of the war, but were sent last winter to Russia. The adventures of the ships carrying them, which were ice-bound for months in the White Sea, have already been narrated, but some time ago it was stated that they had been got ashore and were now available for service.

Another fourteen thousand prisoners bring the total of the Russian captures in the present drive up to 162,000. It is not stated whether all of them are armed soldiers, or, as is perhaps more probable, a certain proportion consists of camp followers and other civilians. There is no reason to doubt the statement that the Austrians have evacuated Czernovitz. This is the third, if not the fourth, time that the Russians have captured it during the present war. This time we may fairly hope that they have got it permanently, and that it will not change hands again until the war is over, when it will presumably go to Rumania as part of the reward of her neutrality.

It is reported that much of the success attained by the Russians is due to huge Japanese guns, the largest used on any front, and to a new shell of great explosive power. So terrible are the effects of this shell that they have caused a panic among the Austrians. If the reports are true, Germany will be beaten at her own game. Big guns and high explosives have been her great weapons all through the war, used in conjunction with masses of men. Now Russia can also make use of masses of men, and, if she has bigger guns and better explosives, the result should not be in doubt.

The paucity of guns as compared with the number of prisoners captured by the Russians was at first noted with the comment that the Austrians must be retiring in good order. Now it is reported that the guns are beginning to pile up, and the latest figure is 163. This is hopeful, for, though the Austrians may still have reserves of men, once the guns are lost they cannot be easily replaced. If the Russian advance can be maintained, we ought soon to hear of further heavy captures, for the big guns can be moved but slowly, and there must have been some in Volhynia.

Some of our amateur strategists draw from the Russian success the deduction that the French and British forces might with advantage have taken the offensive before this. It is, no doubt, tempting to suppose that what our Eastern Allies have done we could do. But we must remember that conditions on the western line are by no means identical with those on the eastern, and be satisfied with the decision of the high command, which knows all the facts. Both we and our Allies are always eager to attack when anything tangible is to be gained from it—witness the brilliant capture of the Mort Homme trenches last night by the French, and the splendid counter-attack of the Canadians at Ypres which won back nearly all the ground captured by the Germans in their recent advances.

It is now evident that, while the Athens Government is pro-German, the overwhelming majority of the Greek people are in favour of the Entente. It is estimated that a General Election after the demobilisation of the Army would give M. Venezelos a larger measure of authority than he enjoyed in 1912; but, while the King is in his present mood, there is little chance of an election. Thus it is that the hostility of Greece must be regarded as a factor in the war, and it is to be hoped that the leaders of the Entente will take steps accordingly. Greek aid can be entirely dispensed with, and in the Navies of the Allies there is ample security that she can do little harm. But what will happen to Greece when the Allies arrive at peace after a hardly won victory? King Constantine will, perhaps, ask himself that question before very long.

In dealing with the Greek Government we have another powerful weapon besides the power of blockade. That is finance. Greece, owing to the expenses of mobilisation, has a nearly empty Exchequer, and, unless she can get assistance from somewhere, will soon have difficulty in defraying the ordinary expenses of administration, let alone indulging in military adventures. The German money market being closed, she must seek accommodation in Paris or London, and is not likely to get it unless she mends her ways.

On leaving home this morning I was held up by a charming lady and mulcted of sixpence because it was "Forget-me-not Day," the sign being a tiny spray of the little blue flower. On arrival in London I found another "day" in full swing, this time the object being the Bulldog Club. I explained that I had already contributed to one flag day at home, but this answer was not considered an excuse for not buying a paper bulldog. The seller commiserated with me, but thought that it was possible that we should soon be having flags on sale every day. This seems somewhat likely, for the flag season is about to set in with great severity. Alexandra Day stands alone, for it has pre-war claims, and no doubt next week will find it as popular as ever. A Russian flag day follows almost immediately, and again there can be no grumbling. So flag day follows flag day, and each is successful.

A protest against the sinking of the Russian hospital ship Portugal, with a first instalment of ten thousand signatures, has been lodged with the International Committee of the Red Cross at Geneva. The Portugal, it is stated at the Russian Embassy, was so clearly marked that it was recognisable eight miles away. The Turkish submarine sinking it fired a torpedo from seventy or eighty yards, striking the steamer amidships. An interesting point about these protests is—what will happen to them after the war? Will punishment be meted out to those who have wilfully violated the Geneva Convention, or is the protest just a protest and nothing more?

THE GENERAL SYNOD.

Owing to the shortened session of the General Synod it has been arranged that instead of the usual clerical morning meetings on three days, one meeting only will be held, on Wednesday, June 21st, at 9 a.m. sharp, in the Greer Hall. The chair will be taken by the Lord Primate, and an address delivered by the Archbishop of Dublin on "The part which the Church of Ireland ought to take with reference to the forthcoming National Mission in the Church of England." The Holy Communion will be administered at St. Anne's at 7.30 o'clock. Breakfast will be provided for the country clergy on that morning from 6 to 8.45 at 8 Dawson street.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

VERDUN.

The Times directs continuous attention to the mighty struggle for Verdun, because it remains the central factor in the war on land to-day. For the Allies, says our contemporary, and possibly for Germany also, Verdun epitomises the present phase of the war. More blood has been shed around Verdun than in any conflict recorded in history, but more is at stake than the possession of a few scarred hills and an ancient and battered town. Many say that Verdun is not worth to one side or the other the price that is being paid. If Verdun has become a mere symbol, such a view is admissible, but we think it is a mistake to suggest that no important military considerations are now involved in the struggle. Verdun is a position of great value, and we trust that its valorous defence will succeed.

BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES.

The Germans say that they have more than 120,000 infantry in the region of Zonnebeke, Gheluvelt, and further to the south by the Commines Canal. It is believed, says the Special Correspondent of The Times in Amsterdam, that the greater part of these troops are derived from the Belgian occupation force, and a smaller part from the troops on the other sectors on the western front. It is further asserted that the Germans are bringing a very considerable part of their reserves under fire. Not much confidence, however, is to be placed in the reports about troop movements on the Flanders front which reach Holland across the frontier, as many of these reports are, doubtless, purposely put about by the Germans with the object of misleading us.

AUSTRIAN EXHAUSTION.

The Russians, says The Times, furnished yesterday their daily estimate of Austro-Hungarian prisoners captured in Volhynia and Galicia, and the total now reaches an astonishing figure. Since June 5 our Allies have received the surrender of over 2,500 officers and over 165,000 men. No phase of last year's operations on the Eastern front equalled these remarkable successes attained within a period of twelve days. When we add to the total the probable enemy losses in killed and wounded, it must now be clear that the Austrian armies confronting Russia have been rendered incapable of assuming an offensive on a great scale during the current year. The conclusion is of far greater moment than would have been the case in 1915. If any Power is approaching the undeniable exhaustion of her reserves, that Power is Austria-Hungary.

COMMISSIONS TO DOCTORS.

The Medical Correspondent of The Times writes:—I understand that the War Office have decided to grant commissions in the Royal Army Medical Corps to doctors between 45 and 55 years of age volunteering for whole time general service in the United Kingdom. This is an important innovation, and should attract many of the older men to the service. Every man who comes forward will have the satisfaction of knowing that he has released a younger man for active service.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

The tone of the Stock markets yesterday, says The Times, was again quite cheerful. British Government Stocks reacted slightly, but other investment stocks continued to show an upward tendency, owing largely to the scarcity of stock. This was particularly the case in the Foreign market. Among speculative issues, Forestal rose 1s., and Marconi Shares were conspicuous with a rise of 3s. Business was again on a large scale, 3,640 bargains being recorded.

LORD LONGFORD REPORTED DEAD.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MULLINGAR, FRIDAY.

It is reported here that the Countess of Longford received a few days ago from the War Office news that the Earl of Longford had been killed on active service. For several months Lord Longford had been reported "missing." Lord Longford was not only a gallant soldier, whose name and command were mentioned with much credit in official despatches, but in civil life he could certainly claim to be one of the most popular men in the district in which he resided. He gave very large and constant employment at Pakenham Hall, and the splendid residences which he had erected all over his estate for his tenants formed one of many testimonials to his personal interest in their welfare. He was most practical in helping every local enterprise in Castlepollard and the district, and yearly gave his lands for use for the Horse and Cattle Show there, and never failed to give grounds, free of charge, for the holding of football matches, cricket matches, sports, etc., without distinction. The last occasion on which Lord Longford took part in a public capacity at any function in Castlepollard was three or four years ago, when the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen were invited to open the annual Show, and were the guests of Lord Longford at Pakenham Hall. Widespread regret was expressed in Westmeath, and especially in Castlepollard, when the news from the War Office became known. Mr. Philips, J.P., his lordship's agent at Pakenham Hall, called together the large body of employés on the estate, and addressed some touching remarks to them on the sad intelligence, and on the deep personal sorrow which all of them would feel.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S PROPOSALS.

LORD MACDONNELL'S VIEWS.

Colonel Maurice Moore has received a letter from Lord Macdonnell, which says:—"It would be an act of supreme folly to reject the proposals which Mr. Redmond outlined at the Mansion House meeting of the Parliamentary Party last week. These proposals secure Home Rule at once for 26 out of the 32 counties of Ireland; and to reasonable men they hold out the prospect that Home Rule for Ireland—one Parliament for the whole of Ireland—will be established with universal consent within a few years. I do most earnestly hope that the 26 counties will, by overwhelming majorities, stand by Mr. Redmond in this crisis of Ireland's fortunes."

OBITUARY.

MR. R. F. BARRY.

Deep regret is felt in Birr at the death of Mr. R. F. Barry, LL.B., Crown Solicitor, which occurred at his residence, John's place, Birr, after a brief illness. At the Birr Petty Sessions on Friday, Mr. T. R. Garvey, who presided, said that it was the unanimous wish of the magistrates to adjourn the Court as a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Barry, whose death was very deeply regretted in Birr by all who had known him in either his professional or private capacity. Tributes were also paid by Major Bredin, R.M., and Messrs. J. Dooly, J.P., and W. K. Fayle, J.P.; P. V. Loughrey, solicitor; J. J. Kennedy, solicitor; H. Barlow, C.P.S., and G. H. Knox, D.I.

MR. P. R. KELLY.

Yesterday Mr. P. Robert Kelly, Clerk of the Crown and Peace for the County Westmeath, died at his residence, Abbey House, Athlone, after a protracted illness. The deceased gentleman was a son of the late Mr. J. Kelly, J.P., Johnstown House, Athlone, and prior to being appointed Crown Solicitor fifteen years ago was a well-known solicitor in the Midlands, where he carried on a big land agency business. On the retirement of the late Mr. William Mooney two and a half years ago he was appointed Clerk of the Crown and Peace.

WESTERN FIELD OF WAR.

GERMAN ATTACKS AT MORT HOMME

REPULSED BY FRENCH.

Quiet is reported from the British front, although hostile artillery was more than usually active north of La Bassée and in the Loos salient.

According to the French report the Germans have made several counter-attacks on the positions on the southern slopes of Mort Homme, which were captured by the French on Thursday. All these attempts failed. Enemy attacks at Thiaumont Farm were also broken, with heavy losses to the Germans.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

Last night's British communiqué:—

Last night we successfully exploded mines in the neighbourhood of Souchez quarries and Cuinchy. An enemy mine exploded near Givenchy did no damage. To-day hostile artillery has shown rather more than usual activity immediately north of the La Bassée Canal, and in the Loos salient. Our trenches east of Zillebeke were heavily shelled for a short period this afternoon. On the remainder of the British front the day has passed quietly.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Yesterday afternoon's Paris communiqué:—

On the left bank of the Meuse the Germans last night made several counter-attacks on the trenches on the southern slope of the Dead Man captured by us yesterday. All their attempts failed under our fire. The total figure of the German prisoners taken on this front reached 180, including five officers.

On the right bank the enemy, towards six o'clock last night, directed a powerful offensive against our positions to the north of Thiaumont Works from Hill 321 as far as the neighbourhood of Hill 320. The fire of our machine guns and infantry successfully shattered all the attempts, which cost the assailants very heavy losses.

Towards 10 p.m., after a violent bombardment, the Germans attempted an attack towards the east against our trenches on the outskirts of the Bois de la Caillette.

Our curtain fire, which was immediately turned upon them, prevented the Germans from leaving their trenches.

On the rest of the front there was intermittent activity by the artillery.

Last night's communiqué:—

On both banks of the Meuse artillery activity has been intermittent in the course of the day. There has been no infantry action. It is confirmed that the attack delivered by us yesterday on the slopes south of the Mort Homme made us masters of enemy trenches on a front of about a kilometre. All the attempts of the enemy to drive us from them have completely failed. The number of prisoners taken there amounts to more than 200, of whom six are officers. There is nothing to report on the rest of the front.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

Yesterday's Berlin communiqué:—

On the left bank of the Meuse the French attacked the southern ridge of the Mort Homme with strong forces. After temporarily succeeding in gaining ground they were repelled by a short counter-attack. We captured eight officers, 238 men, and several machine guns. Repeated attacks and operations directed late in the evening by the enemy against the German lines on both sides of his positions were completely unsuccessful. The enemy sustained severe losses. On the right bank of the Meuse, except for small infantry engagements in our favour in the Thiaumont ravine, activity was practically limited to strong artillery fire on both sides.

ON THE TIGRIS.

BRITISH REPLY TO TURKISH CLAIMS.

The War Office makes the following announcement:—

There is no change in the situation in Mesopotamia. On the north bank of the Tigris, east of Kut, our trenches have been pushed forward to within two hundred yards of the Turkish Sanna-i-yat position. On the south bank we have occupied an advanced position at Iman Mansura, three and a half miles south of Magasis. No fighting is reported from the Euphrates line, except a small and successful punitive expedition against Arabs, who had persistently cut the telegraph line north of Hamar Lake. On Wednesday night our cavalry raided a hostile Arab tribe, captured two hundred cartloads of grain, and a number of sheep. Three barges on the Tigris were sunk by Turkish artillery fire on June 10th.

The above incidents appear to form the basis upon which the imaginative Turkish official communiqué of the 15th was founded.

ST. JOHN AMBULANCE BRIGADE.

The annual competitions for the Irish Women's Challenge Cup and the Dublin Ambulance Challenge Cup were commenced by St. John Ambulance Brigade, No. 12 (Irish) District, yesterday in Lord Iveagh's Gardens, St. Stephen's Green. The competitions occupied several hours, and will be concluded to-day, when there is to be a joint inspection of the Brigade and Red Cross units. Yesterday the bright weather made the gardens an extremely pleasant resort, and a fair number of the public took advantage of the occasion to enjoy a sojourn in them. No little enjoyment was given by the Dublin Metropolitan Police Band, conducted by Mr. A. J. Norris, rendering several gay selections of music. Tea and luncheon tents, very artistically arranged, and under the management of a committee of which Lady Talbot de Malahide is President and Mrs. Seton Pringle Honorary Secretary, attracted a large number of patrons. Various outdoor games helped to while away the time, as well as the competitions. For the Irish Women's Challenge Cup sixteen teams have entered, and for the Dublin Ambulance Challenge Cup nine teams.

RECEPTION IN GRESHAM HOTEL.

In the evening a much-enjoyed reception was held in the Aberdeen Hall, Gresham Hotel. In honour of the presence of Lady Perrott, the Lady Superintendent-in-Chief of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, a guard of honour was posted at the entrance to the hotel. The guard was composed of men drawn from the Dublin Division, the Glenageary Division, and the Dublin Building Trades' Division, in command of Corps Superintendent Webb. The guests were received by Dr. Lumsden, Deputy Commissioner, and Mrs. Lumsden. Amongst the large company present were:—General Ford, D.D.M.S., Dublin Garrison; Mrs. Hignett, Deputy Head Irish War Hospital Supply Depôt; Mrs. Heppell-Marr, Assistant County Director; Dr. Ella Webb, Lady of Grace Order of St. John; Dr. MacDowel Cosgrave, President of the Royal College of Physicians, and Knight of Grace Order of St. John; Mr. W. Geoghegan, Assistant Controller and County Director; Major Dawson, R.A.M.C.; Major Dobbyn (Clonmel), Surgeon Story, Dr. Baker, O.T.C.; Lady Beresford, Dr. Mather Thompson, Mr. G. Smith, Mr. Reginald Keatings, Mrs Bermingham, Mrs. Geoghegan, Mr Walter Boyd, Mr. Quan Smith, etc. A delightful musical programme was kindly arranged for the occasion by Mr. Melfort D'Alton. He himself introduced the programme with an artistic rendering of Matteir's Romanza, "Non e Ver," and later in the evening he conferred a further favour on the audience by singing the old English ballad, "To Mistress Rose." Miss Maud Hutton played in brilliant style three pianoforte selections by Schubert, Liszt, Gounod, and Grainger. Mr. Goldwater's violin solo, a Hungarian air by Hubay, was an exceptionally fine performance, and was deservedly encored. Mr. Vine Sanderson was in excellent voice, and sang with all his accustomed power and expression Hemery's beautiful song, "A Golden Memory." Dr. W. S. Haughton also contributed much to the pleasure of the audience by his singing of Cowen's "At the mid hour of night." Mr. T. H. Weaving was at the piano, and played the accompaniments with his usual good taste and judgment.

THE RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

ENEMY EFFORTS TO TAKE OFFENSIVE.

BIG INCREASE OF PRISONERS.

Yesterday's Petrograd communiqué:—

By an impetuous stroke our infantry, powerfully supported by artillery, gained possession of the Rostok Wood, south of Lower Potschaieff, taking some prisoners, and capturing machine guns and trench mortars. By an heroic effort the troops of the army of General Stcherbatchiff yesterday overthrew the Austrians in the Gaivorvnka-Gnilovody district.

On the west bank of the Strypa, north-west of Buczacz, the struggle with the Austrians, and Germans supporting them, still continues.

Up till now we have captured 6,000 prisoners, as well as guns and machine guns.

A hostile aeroplane has dropped bombs on Tarnapol. Our gallant Don Cossacks have taken prisoners seven officers and 600 men. The approximate reckoning for yesterday gives a total of 100 officers and 14,000 men taken prisoners, and in addition much war material has fallen into our hands.

On the Dvina front, and to the southward as far as the Polesie region, there has been an exchange of rifle and artillery fire. Our artillery yesterday maintained a violent cannonade in the Dvinsk region, and attempts by the enemy in several sectors to take the offensive were all stopped by our fire.

Fighting continues on the front of our armies south of the Polessie. The enemy suffered heavy losses in the course of an encounter with our troops. Details have been received concerning operations in various sectors. In the course of a powerful but fruitless counter-attack by the enemy on the Styr, in the region of Sokul, north of Rojistche, we took prisoners 20 officers and 1,760 men. In the region west and south-west of Lutzk during the pursuit of the enemy our cavalry fought several successful actions. North-west of Kreminetz our bold soldiers belonging to the troops of General Sakharoff, after a desperate fight, dislodged the enemy from his fortified positions on the River Pluicheva, between Kozine and Tarnavka, by vigorous assault. One of our young regiments, led by Colonel Tatarnoff, after a fierce fight, forded the deep river, whose water rose to their chins. One company was engulfed, and died a heroic death, but the valour of their comrades and their officers resulted in the disorderly flight of the enemy, of whom 70 officers and 5,000 men were taken prisoners. Two guns and a great many machine guns, thousands of rifles and cartridges, and enormous reserves of barbed wire were captured.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

Yesterday's Berlin communiqué:—

The Russians again continued their efforts yesterday against the front of General Count Bothmer's Army, north of Przewloka. During the repulse of the enemy over 400 men remained in the hands of the defenders.

UNITED STATES PRESIDENCY.

DEMOCRATS AND FOREIGN INTERFERENCE.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

ST. LOUIS, THURSDAY.

The Democratic Convention has nominated President Wilson by acclamation as its candidate for the Presidency. Mr. Thomas R. Marshall has also been re-nominated as a candidate for the Vice-Presidency.

Shortly after midnight the Platform Committee was not ready with its report, and the Convention adjourned until eleven o'clock to-morrow morning. The nominations were carried out amid scenes of the greatest enthusiasm.

FRIDAY.

The Democratic Convention has adopted the platform which the Committee toiled all night to get into shape. The keenest curiosity existed as to the wording of the plank repudiating the Teutonic conspirators, and this plank President Wilson is said to have dictated. It sets forth that the United States must not be a nation of partisans, but a nation of patriots. Whoever, it continues, is actuated by any purpose to promote the interests of a foreign Power in disregard of our own country's welfare, or to injure this Government in its foreign relations, or to cripple and destroy its industries at home; whoever, by arousing prejudices—racial, religious, or of any other nature, creates discord and strife among our people, and so obstructs the wholesome processes of unification, is faithless to the trust which the privileges of citizenship repose in him, and is disloyal to the country. We, therefore, condemn as subversive to this nation's unity and integrity, and as destructive of its welfare, the activities and designs of every group or organisation, political or otherwise, that has for its object the advancement of the interests of a foreign Power, whether such object is promoted by intimidating the Government, a political party, or representatives of the people; or which is calculated and tends to divide our people into antagonistic groups, and thus to destroy that complete agreement and solidarity of the people, and that unity and sentiment of national purpose so essential to the perpetuity of the nation and its free institutions. We condemn all alliances and combinations of individuals in the country, of whatever nationality or descent, who agree to conspire together for the purpose of embarrassing and weakening our Government, or of improperly influencing and coercing our public representatives in dealing or negotiating with any foreign Power. We lay the charge that such conspiracies, among the limited number that exist, have been instigated for the purpose of advancing the interests of foreign countries, to the prejudice and detriment of our country. We condemn any political party, which, in our view of the activities of such conspirators, surrenders its integrity or modifies its policy. The platform further declares in favour of the Administration Shipping Bill, which is now pending; a systematic increase in the Army army and navy for defensive purposes, and incorporated the doctrine of freedom of the seas in the following words—"We believe that the time has come when it is the duty of the United States to join with other nations of the world in any feasible association that would effectively serve these principles, the freedom of States and of individuals therein, and to maintain inviolate the complete security of the highway of the seas for the common and unhindered use of all nations." After reaffirming the Monroe Doctrine, the platform goes on to say that the United States has no designs on the Sovereignty of any of its Pan-American neighbours, but that the forces of the United States necessarily have had occasion to occupy part of Mexican territory, where they must remain until, by the restoration of law and order there, the repetition of bandit excursions into United States territory are rendered improbable. In conclusion, it appeals to the record of the present democratic Administration, which has maintained the honour and dignity of the United States, and has at the same time retained the respect and friendship of all nations of the world.

GENERAL SMUTS'S PROGRESS.

DIFFICULTY OF WATER SUPPLY.

The Secretary of the War Office makes the following announcement:—

Telegraphing on June 16th, Lieutenant-General Smuts reports that, after encountering considerable difficulties owing to lack of water and the density of the bush, portions of Major-General Hoskins' column, under Brigadier-General Sheppard, reached Kwedizwa, six miles north of Handeni, on the night of June 15th, the advance troops pushing on to the village of Kilimanjaro, close to Handeni, the following morning. A considerable German force is reported to be entrenched near the water supply at Handeni. Simultaneously with the above movement, Brigadier-General Hannyngton's column, advancing along the railway, occupied the important station of Korogwe, and secured the wagon bridge over the Pangani River. On Lake Victoria our forces have occupied the Island of Ukerewe, north of the German port of Mwanza, capturing two Krupp guns and a quantity of stores. There is no news from the Southern theatre nor from the Kondoa Irangi area.

FRENCH CHAMBER AND THE WAR.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

PARIS, FRIDAY.

The Chamber of Deputies decided this afternoon, by 412 votes to 138, to resolve itself into a secret committee to discuss certain questions in connection with the war. The ordinary sitting was therefore closed at half-past two in order that the public galleries might be cleared.

At ten minutes to seven the second session was adjourned until to-morrow.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN—NEW STATUTE.

A new statute for University College, Dublin, issued yesterday, provides that the Professors of Jurisprudence and of Roman Law, the Professor of Constitutional Law and of the Law of Public and Private Wrongs, and the Professor of the Law of Property and the Law of Contracts, shall, subject to good conduct and the due fulfilment of their duties, hold office for seven years, and be eligible for reappointment. Each professor shall, subject to like conditions, continue in office until he have attained the age of 65, and may thereafter be retained by the Senate for five further years, provided this course is recommended by the Governing Body, with the approval of the President, and is sanctioned by the Senate annually. Any existing officer of the late Royal University who has been appointed to a professorship of the College is to hold office for seven years from the date of dissolution of the Royal University, and may thereafter be reappointed, notwithstanding the fact that he has reached the age of 65 years, and may be continued in office from year to year on the same terms as other professors who have attained the age of 65. The statute enacts that the Professorships of Commerce and of Modern Irish History shall each be a full-time professorship.

KILLINEY WAR DEPOT FETE.

OPENED BY MARCHIONESS OF WATERFORD.

A fête was opened yesterday, and will be continued to-day, in aid of the Killiney War Supply Depôt and the Killiney Work Party, at Mount Druid, Killiney, which was lent for the occasion by Mr. Patrick Field, J.P. The gardens are carefully laid out, and offer one of the pleasantest prospects of valley and hill in South County Dublin. The fête was organised by Mrs. Domvile, and proved a great success, one of the best features being the concerts arranged by Mrs. Valentine Blake and Mrs. Mauders, who was unavoidably absent. The Marchioness of Waterford, who was accompanied by Lady Blanche Beresford, opened the fête. In doing so she said that it had given her much pleasure to attend and take part. There was every evidence that the fête would have great success.

Mr. Patrick Field moved a vote of thanks to Lady Waterford for attending. He hoped that when next the Marchioness of Waterford visited them it would be on some occasion in the near future, when they would be joyously celebrating the defeat of their enemies.

The vote was passed with acclamation.

On the motion of Canon Stoney, a vote of thanks to Mr. Field for his kindness was heartily adopted.

The concerts were a great success, under the management of Mrs. Valentine Blake, who also contributed several songs. Mr. Tom Bourke was capital at the piano, after the manner of Miss Margaret Cooper. The Marchioness of Waterford, Lady Blanche Beresford, and Miss Ricci gave a well-rendered trio of two violins and piano. Amongst many other good performers were:—Miss Casey, in a recitation; Miss Cecil D'Arcy, in a dance; and Sir Valentine Grace, with an original ode.

Corrig Castle Hospital was represented in the persons of Sergeant Woods, R.D.F., who was wounded at Gallipoli; and Private Duggan, R.D.F., wounded in Sackville street. They gave efficient service at a money-getting game. A boy scout detachment from the 9th South County Dublin (Shankill) Battalion, and the Women Signallers' Territorial Corps, South County Dublin Platoon, under Lieutenant Gill, also gave good help. Many pretty stalls were laid out in the house, where great business was done by ladies dressed in the Depôt uniform. The stallholders were:—

Fancy Stall—Mrs. Domvile, Miss Field, Miss E. Field, and Mrs. [illegible]owell.
Soldiers' Comforts—Mrs. G. Stewart, Miss Vernon, Mrs. Gibbings, and Miss Falkiner.
War Offering Stall—Mrs. Kerin, Mrs. G. Symes, Miss Stoney, and Lady O'Connell.
Home Produce—Mrs. Hannay, Mrs. Ashlin, and War Depôt—Mrs. Pim.
War Oépôt—Mrs. Pim.
Hat Competition—Mrs. Tristram and Mrs. Orr.
Tea Stall—Mrs. Gill, Mrs. Alcock, Mrs. Turbett, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Jeffcott, and Miss Rutherford.

THE EXCLUSION OF ULSTER.

Letter from the Earl of Arran.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I understand from the leading article on Mr. Asquith's speech in the Northern Whig that, if the exclusion of the six counties is only to be a provisional arrangement, Ulster Unionists will have no more to do with the negotiations.

I believed that the sacrifice of the Counties of Monaghan, Donegal, and Cavan was decided on because a settlement was considered necessary for the welfare of the Empire. Surely the Unionists of the remaining counties of Ulster are not less patriotic than those of Monaghan, Donegal, and Cavan, and will not hesitate to sacrifice themselves also, and agree to a provisional arrangement, or even come under a Home Rule Parliament themselves, if the welfare of the Empire at such a moment demands a settlement, and a settlement cannot be arrived at by any other means?

I decline to think that the patriotism of the men of Protestant Ulster is sufficient for them to expect a sacrifice of everything from their fellow-Covenanters, but insufficient for them to feel the necessity of making even a lesser sacrifice themselves.—Yours, etc.,

ARRAN.

London, June 15th, 1916.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

ULSTER AND THE SETTLEMENT.

Nationalist opposition to the suggested way out of the Home Rule difficulty is growing stronger each day, declares the Belfast correspondent of the Morning Post, and if the omens are to be relied upon the coming provincial Conference will be remarkable for its lack of unanimity. Up to last evening every district conference held has passed a resolution protesting in the strongest possible manner against the proposed exclusion of the six counties, and in most cases the delegates appointed to the provincial Conference were instructed to vigorously oppose the exclusion of Ulster, or any portion of Ulster, either temporarily or permanently, from the control of the Irish Parliament. These instructions tell their own tale.

HOME RULE SETTLEMENT.

CONFERENCE OF ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOPS.

MEETING WITH MR. REDMOND.

Yesterday a meeting of Roman Catholic Bishops of the North of Ireland, on the invitation of Cardinal Logue, was held in the Minerva Hotel, Dublin. The following Bishops were present:—Most Rev. Dr. O'Donnell, Diocese of Raphoe; Most Rev. Dr. Finnegan, Kilmore; Most Rev. Dr. M'Kenna, Clogher, Most Rev. Dr. MacRory, Down and Connor, Most Rev. Dr. M'Hugh, Derry and Raphoe; and the Most Rev. Dr. Mulhern, Dromore. Cardinal Logue presided, and it is understood that the meeting had reference to Mr. Lloyd George's proposals with reference to the future government of Ireland, and especially with regard to the position of Ulster.

During the day Mr. John Redmond joined the conference, and dined with the Bishops in the afternoon. No report of the proceedings has been issued.

FEELING IN THE COUNTRY.

CORK.

At the annual meeting of the Cork County Council yesterday, Mr. E. Fitzgerald sought the suspension of the standing orders to move—

That we view with horror the proposed settlement of the Irish question, the necessity for which adjustment has been admitted by all eminent English Statesmen, by partitioning Ireland. That, as this proposal is repugnant to the vast majority of Irishmen, and will be regarded as a pernicious effort to smother our rights by indefinite promises of better things to come, we publicly announce that we repel any such proposals, and call for an undivided Ireland under Home Rule, with proper fiscal provisions. That we express our belief that, if the attempt be persisted in, it will lead to a state of the greatest unrest in Ireland, and be regarded as a wanton aggravation and breach of faith by Irishmen over the seas.

Mr. Jeremiah O'Mahony seconded the resolution. They ought to let the Northern people know their views beforehand.

The Chairman said he would call a special meeting for this matter.

Suspension of the standing orders was refused by 22 votes to 15, and the resolution stands for a special meeting.

MEATH.

At the annual meeting of the Meath County Council resolutions from the Omagh Conference on the subject of the proposed Home Rule settlement were read. The following amended resolution was proposed by Mr. Kennedy:—

That we condemn the proposals for Home Rule settlement—re partition of Ireland, published in the Press—which, in our opinion, would only aggravate the unhappy state of Ireland, and further embitter her relations with England. We, therefore, trust that Nationalists throughout the country will take immediate and effective steps to prevent their adoption.

Mr. Kennedy said it would be a disastrous day for Ireland if they were to get Home Rule in the form of a piecemeal Government through the medium of a nominal Dublin Parliament. Home Rule for Ireland, with any part of it excluded, was not, in his opinion, Home Rule. There was a large proportion of Irish representatives not in touch with the Irish people. (Hear, hear.) He did not make any reflection on these men, but as long as they had some men representing Ireland who had not even a cabbage garden in the country you could not expect them to understand the real feelings of the people they purported to represent.

Mr. P. Moore seconded.

Sir N. T. Everard—The Council seems to have lost sight of the fact that it is not proposed that there shall be any permanent partition of Ireland. It is simply an emergency measure to carry us through for the duration of the war. It is quite certain that the inclusion of Ulster could not be effected without civil war. We do not want that now.

The resolution was declared carried, Sir N. T. Everard not voting.

ENNISCORTHY.

At the Enniscorthy District Council meeting on Thursday afternoon, the Omagh resolutions, which condemned Mr. Lloyd George's proposal, to cut out a portion of Ulster, were adopted.

Mr. H. A. Lett (a Protestant member) said he was opposed to the adoption of the resolution, for the reason that the settlement of the matter had been placed in the hands of Mr. Lloyd George and other gentlemen, and he did not think the present was a time for outsiders to interfere. At the same time, he desired to say that he was strongly opposed to the partition of the country under the Home Rule Act. The Protestants of the South and West of Ireland did not want to be isolated from the rest of the country. They wanted to be with their neighbours. (Hear, hear.) His desire was to see Home Rule settled in a manner that would satisfy all interests in Ireland.

A resolution was then also passed, calling on the Irish Party to summon a National Convention to deal with the Ulster question.

LISTOWEL.

At a specially-convened meeting of the Listowel Urban Council, the Chairman (Mr. J. M'Kenna, V.C., Co.C.) proposed the following resolution:—

That this Council believe that the exclusion of any part of Ireland from the benefits of Home Rule would be detrimental to the best interests of the country, and hereby enter their strongest protest against the exclusion of Ulster or any partition. The Council also wish to place on record that Mr. Redmond or the Irish Party have no mandate from the country on this point, and that a convention, fully representative of the Irish people, should be called and consulted before accepting from the Government any measure of Home Rule which would include in its provisions the exclusion of any portion of the country.

Mr. C. Dillon seconded the resolution, which was passed unanimously.

THURLES.

By the casting vote of the Chairman, at Thursday night's meeting of the Thurles Urban Council, the Council decided not to interfere in the present controversy as to the exclusion of the Ulster counties from the Home Rule Bill.

CARLOW.

At the annual meeting of the Carlow County Council—the Right Hon. Walter Kavanagh, P.C., presiding—a resolution dealing with the Irish question was withdrawn by Mr. C. F. M'Nally, J.P., on the understanding that the Chairman would do all possible to help in bringing about some understanding. The Chairman said that nothing could go through Parliament unless by an agreed settlement. If they did not agree to the proposals they would have to remain as they were.

ULSTERMEN IN AMERICA AND HOME RULE.

The Ulster Society of Pittsburg, U.S.A., has passed a resolution in reference to the Irish rebellion and Home Rule, in which it says:—

Be it resolved that the Ulster Society of Pittsburg, while deploring the fact that men of Irish birth should lend their aid to the enemies of their country, it rejoices that the late attempt at an uprising against the British Government serves to confirm the opinion that Home Rule for Ireland would mean the placing of the liberties of a loyal minority in the hands of rebels and traitors.

MEMORIAL TO ADMIRAL CRADOCK

UNVEILED BY MR. BALFOUR.

FIRST LORD'S ESTIMATE OF HEROIC SAILOR.

Mr. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, delivered an address yesterday afternoon in York Minster, on the occasion of the unveiling of a mural monument to the late Rear-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, K.C.V.O., C.B., who gallantly went down with his ship, the Good Hope, in the battle off Coronel on November 1st, 1914.

The ceremony of unveiling was undertaken by the Marquis of Zetland, who, in the course of his remarks, said that when Sir Christopher Cradock was offered his last command he felt very considerable doubt as to the fitness and qualifications of the vessels under his care. He represented to the highest authorities his feelings of distrust. This, said Lord Zetland, was some time before the outbreak of the European war, at a period when we did not, many of us, expect war with Germany. I understand that Admiral Cradock made representations to the highest authorities at the time, not to my right hon. friend here this afternoon (Mr. Balfour), but to the right hon. gentleman who was then First Lord of the Admiralty. But Sir Christopher Cradock was not a man to shirk his duty. He accepted his command, and went to America with the vessels placed under him, and we know what happened. The moment war broke out Admiral Cradock went in search of the enemy. He did not employ such tactics as sheltering under cover of darkness. He upheld the best traditions of the British Navy.

MR. BALFOUR.

After the bugles had sounded the "Last Post,"

Mr. Balfour addressed the congregation. He said—It may seem, perhaps, something of a paradox that the very moment when the sounds of victory are in our ears we should be assembled here to commemorate a naval occasion on which victory did not crown our arms, and in which failure, though a glorious failure, was the lot of those who represented us, and yet think it a true instinct that makes the people, not merely of Yorkshire, but of Britain, recognise that in Admiral Cradock they are dealing with more than the gallant commander of an unsuccessful action. They recognise that his name deserves to be enrolled among those who, in this tremendous struggle, have held high the honour of their country. We know little of the plans or the designs of Admiral Cradock—those who could have told us have passed away for ever—but this we do know, and we know it authentically, from a wireless message sent through by Admiral Cradock to the distant Canopus—that he intended to attack the enemy. What, then, was his design in attacking a force obviously superior to his own, a force which, except for some extraordinary accident, some stroke of unexpected fortune he could not expect successfully to cope with? I think a satisfactory explanation can be given. Remember what the circumstances of the German squadron were: they were not like those of the German High Seas Fleet the other day, off the coast of Jutland, close to their own ports, capable of taking in a damaged ship to their own dockyards, and their own protected bases. The German Admiral in the Pacific was very differently situated. He was far from any port where he could have refitted. No friendly bases were open to him. If, therefore, he suffered damage, though, in suffering damage, he apparently inflicted greater damage than he received, yet his power, great for evil, while he remained untouched, might suddenly, as by a stroke of the enchanter's wand, be utterly destroyed. He would be a great peril as long as his squadron remained efficient, and Admiral Cradock had no reason to foresee the battle of the Falkland Islands, which, within a few weeks, put an utter and complete end to the force with which he had been successfully engaged. That event was not, and could not be, within his knowledge. He could only judge by the circumstances that were before him, and if he judged that his squadron, that he himself, and those under him, were well sacrificed if they destroyed the power of this hostile fleet, then, I say, that there is no man, be he sailor or be he civilian, but would say that such a judgment showed not only the highest courage, but the greatest unselfishness; and that Admiral Cradock, by absolute neglect of personal interests and personal ambitions, had shown a wise judgment in the interests of his country, and had proved himself to have been what all his friends knew him to have been, a man who never would allow, I wont say any consideration of personal safety—no sailor would allow that—but questions of personal pride or personal ambition to stand for one instant in the way of that which he conceived to be his duty to his country. If I am right, it must be to a certain extent a matter of conjecture; but if I am right in the account which I have given of the motives which animated him, there never was a nobler act, unsuccessful though it was, than that which he performed off the coast of South America.

THE LAST SCENE.

We do not know, we never shall know, what were the thoughts of Admiral Cradock when it became evident that, out-gunned and out-ranged, success was an impossibility. We shall never know what he felt when the setting sun of that evening threw his own ships up clearly against the bright western sky, a mark for his enemies, and at the same time rendered his own fire difficult and ineffective by placing them in the shade. He must have realised then that his hopes were dashed for ever, that his plan had failed. In the face of death, certain and imminent, I doubt not that he thought, if only for a moment, of how his friends and his countrymen would judge his action. If he did, I feel sure he realised what is the truth—that he could safely leave his fame to the admiring justice of his countrymen. He lies beneath the ocean—no fitter resting place for men of our race. His body is separated from us by half the world, and he and his gallant comrades lie far from the pleasant homes of England, yet they have their reward, and we, looking at what they attempted, and judging what they did in the light of what they attempted, are surely right in saying that theirs is an immortal place in the great roll of naval heroes whose work has built up the Empire and secured the freedom of mankind, and whose work, at the very moment I am speaking, is preserving that Empire and maintaining that freedom, and who, God willing, will have successors who will preserve and maintain it until the end of time.

DISABLED SOLDIERS' FLAG DAY.

Hundreds of Irish soldiers and sailors are already discharged as disabled, and unfortunately more will follow. The public of Dublin will have an opportunity of helping them on Thursday, 22nd inst., for it is their Flag Day. A general purchase of flags is invited, or cheques may be sent to Mrs. Andrew Beattie, who is organising the day on behalf of the Irish Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, 35 Dawson street, Dublin.

COURTMARTIAL IN DUBLIN.

ATTEMPTED GUN-RUNNING IN KERRY.

TWO MEN ON TRIAL.

A General Courtmartial at Richmond Barracks yesterday resumed the trial of Austin Stack, solicitor's clerk, residing at Tralee, and Cornelius Collins, clerk in the General Post Office, Dublin, residing at 500 North Circular road, Dublin. The charges against the accused are—(1) That, in or about the month of April, 1916, they conspired and agreed with certain other disloyal and disaffected persons to bring about a rebellion in Ireland, and to spread disaffection amongst the civil population of the country, such act being of such a nature as to be calculated to be prejudicial to the public safety and the defence of the realm, and being committed with the intention and for the purpose of assisting the enemy. (2) That, in or about the month of April, knowing, or having reasonable grounds for supposing, that certain persons, by name Monteith and Bailey, were then engaged, contrary to the regulations for the defence of the realm, in the importation of arms and ammunition into Ireland, without previous permit of the competent military or naval authority—which said arms and ammunition, as they (the accused) then well knew, or had reasonable grounds for supposing, were intended to be used in aid and in furtherance of the rebellion in Ireland—they did harbour the said persons, Monteith and Bailey, such act being calculated to be prejudicial to the public safety and the defence of the realm, and being committed with the intention and for the purpose of assisting the enemy. After the case was opened on Thursday the Court adjourned for the attendance of a witness from Tralee.

Major-General Lord Cheylesmore, K.C.V.O., presided, and Mr. Kenneth Marshall was Judge Advocate.

Major E. G. Kimber, D.S.O., conducted the prosecution.

Mr. E. J. McElligott, K.C., and Mr. Arthur Clery (instructed by Mr. John O'Connell, LL.D., Tralee) appeared for the accused.

At the sitting of the Court, Mr. McElligott called Mr. McCarthy.

Major Kimber objected that this was not the usual procedure.

Mr. McElligott said he had stated on the previous day what he intended to do, and the Court had been adjourned for that purpose. The point he made was that the prisoners had been taken out of the custody of the civil authority and placed in military custody without legal sanction. There was no right in the world for the military's taking the prisoners out of the custody of the civil authority, and therefore they were wrongly before this tribunal.

The President—What is your legal ground for stating that opinion?

Mr. McElligott said that under the Defence of the Realm Act there was no provision for the handing over of the prisoners by the civil to the military power, and that both the civil power and the military power had acted illegally—the one in handing the prisoners over, and the other having taken them out of the custody of the civil authority. The only tribunal which would have seizen of the prisoners would be a tribunal of the civil power, that was the court and jury under the civil power in whose custody they were at the time. Counsel then quoted legal authorities for his proposition, and mentioned the case of Wolfe Tone, who in 1798, while an officer in the service of France, was taken into military custody in Ireland. The Court of King's Bench in Ireland was moved, and it granted a writ of habeas corpus, which took the accused out of military custody, and he was tried by a civil tribunal, which convicted him.

Major Kimber replied that the accused were here under the provisions of the Defence of the Realm Act, 1914, and under the state of the law created by the proclamation of the 26th April, which suspended the right of trial by jury.

Mr. Fras. G. McCarthy, Petty Sessions Clerk, Tralee, and Mr. Patk. McHugh, Governor of Tralee Jail, were examined to prove that the resident magistrate at Tralee on the 22nd of April committed the accused to the prison at Tralee on the charge against them now, and that they were taken over by the military.

District Inspector Britten, R.I.C., was examined by Major Kimber to prove that immediately after the accused were remanded by the resident magistrate he sent the matter forward to the competent military authority, and in consequence of that notification was sent by the competent military authority at Queenstown determining that the accused should be taken over by the military for trial.

The Court having considered the matter in private, over-ruled Mr. McElligott's objection, and the case was proceeded with.

CASE FOR THE PROSECUTION.

Major Kimber stated the case for the prosecution. Stack, he said, was a well-known commander of the Irish Volunteers, and Collins was a clerk in the employment of His Majesty in the Dublin Post Office. The events which brought about the charge occurred immediately before the rebellion. They were charged with doing acts that were calculated to assist the enemy. They were in touch with people who came to this country, accompanied by German officers and German bluejackets, who were taken prisoners at Cork and interned. At 2 o'clock on the afternoon of April 20th a pilot in Tralee Bay, from his garden, saw a two-masted steamer coming in from the N.N.W. towards Scraggen Point, on the west side of the bay. She manœuvred about, and he kept her in sight till 11 o'clock that night. She showed no lights. She was about two miles out. At 6 o'clock next morning he saw her again, and watched her till 11.30, when she weighed anchor and went out to sea. Later on on that day, outside Cork Harbour, a boat put off from her with three German officers and three German bluejackets, who were taken prisoners by a patrol boat. Subsequently twenty German bluejackets in a boat were taken prisoners. The vessel herself was sunk by her crew. Her cargo consisted of arms and ammunition, brought from Germany to aid the rebellion in Ireland. In the early morning of April 20, while the pilot was watchig this vessel, a small farmer left his house to visit a holy well some short distance away. He came back, as he had gone, by the Currahane Strand, and saw on the shore a small, flat-bottomed boat, with four oars lying beside her in the water. In the boat was a dagger, and close by her, on the sands, a tin can and the footprints of three men. Later he discovered three Mauser pistols, a handbag, which contained maps and flags. With the assistance of his neighbours, this farmer, whose name is McCarthy, pulled the boat up high and dry. About 4.30 that same morning a servant girl named Gorman saw three strange men passing along the road in the direction of Ardfert. One of them was a tall, dark man, who was subsequently identified as Sir Roger Casement. The next part of the story was picked up at Tralee, where early that morning two strangers entered a newspaper shop and asked to be directed to the local commander of the Irish Volunteers. One of them gave the name of Murray, but it afterwards turned out that his real name was Monteith. The other gave the name of Mulcahy, and he turned out to be Bailey, who was afterwards charged in London. Messages were sent out, and the result was that the two accused men arrived at the shop. Stack, Collins, and Monteith shut themselves up in the parlour, and Bailey remained in the kitchen, where all four had been first. The first man to leave was Stack, who went to engage a motor car. Then Bailey and Collins left, and Monteith remained in the house and had refreshments. Meanwhile, the Irish Volunteers had assembled, and he was taken to the hall of the Hibernians. At 11 o'clock that morning Stack, Bailey, and Collins set out in a motor car for Ballyheigue.

HUE AND CRY RAISED.

Returning to the events on the shore, the Prosecutor said that when the boat was found a hue and cry was raised. The police were sent out, and a sergeant and a constable found Casement in an old fort between Currahane and Ardfert. He had with him some sandwiches made of German sausage and black bread. Prosecutor's theory was that Stack and Collins had set out to search for Casement, and twisted and turned through the country, but they were met by the police everywhere and searched. They were driven to return to Tralee without finding Casement. At six o'clock that evening Head Constable Kearney arrested Collins in a public-house in Tralee. Collins said that he had come to Tralee the night before on a holiday, and that he had been out for a motor drive with Stack and Mulcahy, who, he said, lived in Mountjoy street, Dublin. Collins, when searched, had a Browning revolver, 55 rounds of ammunition, £35, and an English-German dictionary in his possession. Stack came to the police station to see Collins, and he was there and then arrested. A number of documents were found at Stack's lodgings in Tralee. Among them was a letter from Liberty Hall, signed James Connolly, in which it was stated—"It is not our purpose to disrupt, but rather to enforce and strengthen the true National movement, and in a town the size of Tralee there is no necessity for any other military body than the Volunteer Corps which has stood out so splendidly by the true Irish ideal—the corps that you command." Attached to that letter was a piece of printed matter in these words—"The humanising of war—you might as well talk of humanising hell! When a silly ass at The Hague got up and talked about the amenities of civilised warfare, and putting your prisoners' feet in hot water, and giving them gruel, my reply, I regret to say, was considered totally unfit for publication. As if war could be civilised! If I am in command when war breaks out, I shall issue as my orders:—The essence of war is violence; moderation in war is imbecility; hit first, hit hard, and hit everywhere. . . If you rub it in both at home and abroad that you are ready for instant war with every unit of your strength in the first line, and intend to be first in, hit your enemy in the belly, and kick him when he is down, and boil your prisoners in oil (if you take any), and torture his women and children; then people will keep clear of you."

Other documents consisted of maps showing parts of Tralee, telegraph and telephone wires—in order, no doubt, that they might be readily cut. He submitted to the Court that the plan found was one to assist the landing. Further, there was a code arrangement, and information as to food supplies and other matters.

THE EVIDENCE.

Frank Goodwin, a pilot, residing at Scraggen Point, Tralee Bay, answering Major Kimber, told how he watched the strange boat in Tralee Bay. She was painted black, with a black funnel which had a white band on top of it. Two flags were painted on her sides—the Norwegian flag.

John McCarthy, a farmer, living at Currahane, near the seashore, repeated the evidence that he gave in London regarding the finding of the flat-bottomed boat, and a black bag and tin box and other things.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION FOUND.

Sergeant Thomas Hearn, R.I.C., stationed at Ardfert, stated that on the morning of Thursday, April 20th, he received a report at 8.30 from Patrick Driscoll as to the finding of the boat. Accompanied by Constable O'Reilly he went to Currahane strand where he met John McCarthy and a number of men. He saw on the shore a small four-oared boat the like of which he had not seen before. In consequence of what McCarthy had told him he went to McCarthy's house, half a mile away. McCarthy handed him three Mauser pistols, in cases, fully loaded, and a black satchel, and some ammunition which suited the pistols. In the satchel was a flash lamp, with some foreign language on it, which he believed to be German. There were also maps of the coast of Ireland, 900 rounds of ammunition, and some wearing apparel. From McCarthy's he went back to the shore where he found a black handbag, in which was a green and yellow flag, a field glass, a flash lamp, forty rounds of ammunition, some wearing apparel, a memorandum book and maps of the coast of Ireland. A brown bag was also found in which there were a lamp, maps, and ammunition.

Mr. McElligott said these things ought to be produced.

In reply to Major Kimber, the witness said they were in custody of the court in London since Sir Roger Casement had been committed for trial.

The Court decided not to hear evidence at present as to the documents.

The witness, in further evidence, said he put all the property found, including the boat, on a cart, and had them conveyed to the police station at Ardfert. Going along the road about 11 o'clock he met a constable who gave him information which caused him to cycle quickly to the barracks. He took out a constable with him—both armed—and they searched the country round in different directions, and alone. The constable called him, and they came together at an old building called M'Kenna's Fort, and there they found a man who evidently was trying to conceal himself.

You had a conversation with him? I had. I asked him——

Mr. McElligott objected that the conversation could not be evidence against the accused here.

The President ruled the question out.

Constable Wm. Larke, R.I.C., stationed at Ardfert, corroborated the evidence of Sergeant Hearn as to the finding of the articles on the Currahane Strand, and the taking of them to the police station.

Constable Bernard Reilly, stationed at Ardfert, also corroborated the sergeant's evidence as to the finding of Sir Roger Casement in McKenna's fort.

Maurice Moriarty, a chauffeur, in the employment of Mr. Nolan, Tralee, stated that on the 21st April he drove Stack out along the road from Tralee. They met two men on the road, and Stack said he was to pick them up. The men, one of whom was Collins, got into the car; the other he had not seen before.

Have you seen him since in London? Yes, in the dock in Bow street.

Who was he with? He was with Sir Roger Casement.

Have you heard his name? Yes; his name is Bailey.

Sergeant Daniel Crowley, R.I.C., deposed to having met the motor car at Banna Strand. He saw two men in the car, one of whom he had seen since at Bow street, London, where his name was given as Bailey.

Constable Neazer, Tralee, said Collins gave his correct name and address when asked.

To Mr. McElligott—He said that he had been stopped by the police at several places, and that he intended to spend his Easter holidays in Tralee, but that he had changed his mind.

Signalman Waghorne, of H.M.S. Bluebell, repeated the evidence that he gave in London as to the overhauling of the steamer Aud, which was sunk by her crew. Two German ensigns were run up at the mastheads. Boats were lowered from the Aud, and her crew of twenty-three German bluejackets and three officers, which had left the vessel, were taken prisoners by the Bluebell. The Aud sank about a mile and a half south south-east of Daunt's Rock, at the mouth of Cork Harbour.

THE ARRESTS.

Head Constable John Kearney, Tralee, stated that he had known Stack for three years, and that he was the commandant of the Volunteers in Tralee. Melinn and O'Connor were also Volunteers. The witness said that he met Collins in Tralee on the night of April 21st. He said he had been for a motor drive to Ardfert, Ballyheigue, and Causeway with a man named Mulcahy, of Mountjoy street, Dublin, and Mr. Stack. He said that he had met Mulcahy once or twice before. He also said that he had been stopped and searched several times during the day. Witness arrested him on a charge of conspiracy to land arms. He made no further statement. Witness searched him, and Collins handed him a revolver and sixty-one rounds of ammunition. He said he usually carried the weapon in Dublin because he was out late at night and early in the morning. The prisoner also had £35 in his possession. Among other things found on him was a soldier's English-German dictionary. At the police station Collins said that he wanted to see Stack, and Stack was sent for. When he came to the station witness arrested him. He asked witness if he was serious in arresting him. He searched him, and found documents on him, and others at his lodgings. Among these was a map of Tralee, showing the post office, the railway station, the G.P.O. store at the station, and other leading places. He also found a paper on which was written a form of oath as follows:—"I swear in the presence of God that, if I become a member of the Irish Volunteers, I will do all in my power to assert the independence of Ireland, keep the secrets of the organisation, and obey the commands of my superior officers." He also found a letter addressed to Stack from the Irish Volunteers in America, which contained the phrase: "The news from Ireland that recruiting is a failure is very gratifying, and has given us renewed hope." The letter was signed Patrick Griffin. There was also a letter from a person in British South Africa, in which occurred the statement: "Now is the moment for Young Ireland to assert itself." There was a bundle of letters, all directed to Stack, on matters relating to the Volunteers, from members of that body in Dublin, such as Bulmer Hobson and the late P. H. Pearse.

In cross-examination by Mr. McElligott, the witness said that the Volunteers armed and drilled openly in Tralee, without any attempt on the part of the authorities to interfere with them. There was among the Volunteers considerable dread of conscription being applied to this country.

And the Irish Volunteers took a strong line as regards conscription? Yes, against it.

You agree that there is a great deal of abuse of Irish political leaders in the letters that have been produced? Yes.

A good deal of what you would describe as froth? Yes.

A BRUTAL DOCUMENT.

You will agree that the newspaper cutting which Major Kimber read in his opening statement is a very brutal document? I should say so.

Did the prisoner tell you that it was an extract from "The Review of Reviews" of February, 1910? No.

Or that the article in the "Review" professed to give the very words as the sentiments of Admiral Lord Fisher? Yes; he said they were the words of Lord Fisher.

Did you confirm that as being cut out of the "Review of Reviews" of February, 1910? No.

A copy of the magazine was handed to witness, and, at counsel's request, he read from an article giving a character sketch of Lord Fisher the part quoted by Major Kimber in his opening statement.

WHAT A DIVER FOUND.

John Dempsey, a diver in the employment of the Admiralty at Queenstown, told the Court that on May 10th he went down in twenty fathoms of water a mile and a quarter from Daunt's Rock Lightship, and examined the hull of the Aud. He found a hole twelve or fourteen feet in length in her side, and he noticed rifles lying on the bed of the sea, one of which he produced as a sample. He went down again last week, and found the word "Aud" was painted on her side, and also the word "Norge." He found the ship was full of rifles.

Mr. S. J. Harrison, first class clerk in the G.P.O., Dublin, said that Collins had been on the Post Office staff at a weekly salary of 47s. 6d., and that he was entitled to twenty-one days' leave in the year. He had his choice of two periods—from the 21st of March to the 13th of April or from the 14th of April to the 11th of May. Collins chose the latter period, and he went away on his holiday.

Constable Daniel Coffey, of the Dublin Metropolitan Police, stated that he knew Collins for the past three years, and that he had seen him several times entering the house in Rutland square which was the headquarters of the Gaelic League, and which was also used as the drill hall of the Irish Volunteers. He also saw him in company with several leaders of the Volunteers. He also saw him at a concert which was given for the benefit of the Irish Volunteers, when John MacNeill and other Sinn Fein leaders were present. He also knew Monteith, who was an instructor of the Irish Volunteers, and marched through the streets with them. Monteith had been served with notice to leave Dublin, and he did leave, but he returned in August last, and remained for a few days. He had not seen him since.

Constable McKeown, D.M.P., said he had seen Collins at the shop of the man Clarke, a leader of the Sinn Feiners, who had recently been executed.

This closed the evidence for the prosecution, and the Court adjourned till this morning.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE GOVERNMENT OF IRELAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I find that the general impression over here is that the Nationalist Party, through Mr. Redmond and Mr. Devlin, have practically accepted Mr. Lloyd George's scheme for what is called the settlement of the government of Ireland. In their speeches, however, to the members of the Conference held recently in Dublin there was no mention of the following facts:—

1st—That, under the scheme, the Royal Irish Constabularly remain an Imperial force under an English Cabinet Minister.

2nd—That martial law and the provisions of the Defence of the Realm Act are to be continued under Sir John Maxwell during the war.

3rd—That the Government are to nominate a certain number of Unionists to sit in the House of Representatives and also to act on the Irish Government.

Do the rank and file of the Nationalists know these terms, and have they accepted them? These are questions that are asked here every hour, and no one appears willing or able to answer them. Perhaps, you could find out.—Yours, etc.,

FRANK BROOKE.

Hyde Park Hotel, London,
June 15th, 1916.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—It is, indeed, to be hoped that Unionists, in accordance with the purport of your leading article of Thursday, will hold a representative meeting without delay. I believe that this is our last chance, and that, if we do not act now, we are doomed. The main question, however, is what line of action is to be proposed at such a meeting.

It is to be presumed that a resolution would, with pretty general consent, be passed to the effect that, in the opinion of Irish Unionists, the amending of the Government of Ireland Bill, and the bringing it into operation, ought to be postponed until the end of the war. In this connection it has to be recalled that the compact made upon the outbreak of war provides, oddly enough, that the Act and its Amending Bill shall come into operation at "a date not later than the end of the war." Perhaps, someone played a trick upon us, for it is certain that we have generally regarded the plan as involving postponement until after the end of the war; and that is the very thing that the form of the words appears to preclude.

At all events, the view of a vast majority would be represented by a resolution to the effect that no settlement ought to be made until after the war. What, then, should be the next step, in view of the fact that the English people, to whom, although they cannot understand Irish affairs, we still are much attached, have decided that in the interest of the Empire a settlement must be reached now and without delay? I suggest that the next step should be to declare that the proposals now before the public are unsatisfactory, that Irish Unionists are convinced that these can be improved upon, and that they are determined to give the country the use of their own intellectual resources towards securing a better settlement if the present proposals be relinquished.

A scheme, admirable in many respects, appears in your correspondence columns to-day over the signature of "Southron." But no one man's scheme can be regarded at present as doing more than affording a basis for discussion, nor could any such scheme be considered at a large meeting. It would be necessary to appoint a committee to draw up a plan on behalf of Irish Unionists.

There is, however, an alternative. In the pamphlet entitled "Ireland's Opportunity," reviewed in your columns last week, it is urged that the only way to secure a proper settlement is to hold an Irish Conference, which shall represent the various political sections and interests among us. In the introduction which I contributed to that pamphlet I urged the importance of action in this direction on the part, more particularly, of Protestants and Unionists. I now suggest that it would be possible, at a representative meeting, such as that which is contemplated, to inaugurate a Conference, declaring the willingness and determination of Unionists to participate in an attempt to reach a genuine settlement. Great issues are at stake.—Yours, etc.,

W. F. TRENCH.

Trinity College, Dublin, June 16th, 1916.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—With reference to the purport of your leading article of to-day's issue, regarding the "silence" of us Southern Unionists in the matter of the Home Rule settlement, I wish to say that we are not in the least perturbed. We have implicit confidence in the superior ability of Sir Edward Carson. He is safeguarding our interests as well as those of our Northern brethren, because six counties permanently excluded—or, better still, until such time as they elect to vote themselves into a Dublin Parliament—afford a simple and effective guarantee regarding our safety, and, for obvious reasons, a thousand times better than all the "scraps of paper" that were ever printed. The only thing we dread is the substitution of the word "temporary" for "permanent."

I do hope that the clean cut of six counties will be permanent; but we need not fear, because our case is in the hands of one of the most capable men of our time, who is determined to see that justice is done.—Yours, etc.,

S. J. MCKEEVER.

Ardee, June 15th, 1916.

THE SCRAPPING OF THE COVENANT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Of all people in the world, the Ulster Unionist Council has scrapped the Covenant, and wiped the ground with Ulster's honour. This fact, dominating the whole situation, is tabooed by the whole Ulster Press; and, in the published proceedings at the Council, but one speaker, Lord Londonderry, referred to it as the abandonment "of the keystone of our faith."

On Ulster Day, Saturday, 28th September, 1912, after Divine Service, as ordered by the Ulster Council and our Church, with uplifted hand, as invoking God, I signed the Covenant—i.e., I took an oath to oppose a Home Rule Parliament by every means, and to stand by the other Covenanters, "being convinced," to quote the Covenant, "in our consciences that Home Rule would be disastrous to the material well-being of Ulster, as well as of the whole of Ireland, subversive of our civil and religious freedom, destructive of our citizenship, and perilous to the unity of the Empire. . . . Humbly relying on the God Whom our fathers in days of storm and trial confidently trusted . . . . we hereby pledge ourselves in solemn Covenant to stand by one another in defending for ourselves and our children our cherished position of equal citizenship in the United Kingdom, and in using all means which may be found necessary to defeat the present conspiracy to set up a Home Rule Parliament in Ireland. And in the event of such a Parliament being forced upon us, we further solemnly and mutually pledge ourselves to refuse to recognise its authority. In sure confidence that God will defend the right, we hereto subscribe our names."

That was a tremendous step for a clergyman to take. It involved possible resistance to the armed forces of the Crown, and, if that failed, the alternative of perjury or exile—perjury, if I accepted Home Rule; exile, if I remained true to the Covenant. Our leader had declared that he knew nothing of four counties, or six, but only Ulster, and that he had prayed and studied the Covenant day and night. I fasted, prayed, and studied for a fortnight, and then I took the oath. My position was mostly that of all the other Covenanters. To uphold the Covenant was the one mandate given to the Council by the Ulster Unionist democracy. Yet behind our backs—even with the Unionist Press burking discussion—the Council has torn up the Covenant—the only basis of its own authority—and scattered it to the four winds of heaven. To-day the honour of Ulster and her pledges are worth exactly the Belgian "scrap of paper," to be broken at the first call of expediency. . . . The three counties—one-third of Ulster—were, by the heroic self-sacrifice of the remaining six, cast to the wolves—to perjury or exile—to save the precious skins of their brother Covenanters. By what necessity? "The Empire is paramount," says our great leader, and the position of the noble six is rendered for all time impregnable. What a consoling thought for them, despite the ruin of their comrades! Yet where is the impregnability, should "the paramount Empire," which, translated, reads "the Coalition Cabinet," demand the sacrifice of one or two more counties to-morrow? "The Empire needs an immediate settlement to win the war." It has not deigned one word of explanation. Is not this the Coalition Cabinet, which, unless rumour has lied more than usual, was deserted and almost wrecked for its gross misconduct of the war, by our great leader himself? Is it on the infallible authority of these twenty-two or twenty-three (which is it?) "wait-and-see-nothings" that he demanded and obtained from the Council the surrender of their principles, the scrapping of their Covenant, the sole basis of their authority, and the "keystone of their faith?"

Twenty or twenty-five thousand of our noblest sons are fighting for the Empire in the splendid Ulster Division. They went voluntarily, guaranteed against any tampering with Home Rule in their absence. We have cut the heart out of them, by our "patriotic" scrapping of our Covenant and theirs. . . .

Ulster has earned—and will, no doubt, receive—her fate, unless, but only unless, she revokes this amazing decision while there is yet time. The Ulster Council has acted ultra vires. It had a mandate to uphold—not to scrap—the Covenant, and that behind the backs of its constituents. As living in the six "impregnable" counties, I can speak impartially. Our great leader has made the mistake of his life; but, if Ulster is still true to God and herself, there may be yet time. Let public meetings be called throughout the province to re-affirm the Covenant; to repudiate this settlement, which settles nothing, but unsettles everything, this pandering to rebellion; and to reject with scorn a dividing either of herself or of the United Kingdom. Quis separabit?—Yours, etc.,

IRISH WAR HOSPITAL SUPPLY DEPOT.

A meeting of the General Committee was held at 40 Merrion square on Wednesday, 14th instant. The Marchioness of Waterford presided. The report of the House Committee on the subject of the late Sinn Fein rising on 24th April was presented. It stated that, as the hospitals were rapidly filling up, it was decided on Thursday, 27th, at once to convert the Dépôt into an auxiliary hospital. The change was effected in less than four hours, under the superintendence of Dr. Ella Webb, Commandant, who at once proceeded to get a staff of trained nurses, V.A.D. nursing sisters. Dr. Crichton acted as day surgeon and Dr. Euphan Maxwell as night surgeon. In addition the following rendered valuable service:—Sir Robert Woods, Dr. F. E. Gordon, Dr. Edward Taylor, Dr. M'Vittie (Medical Stores), and Dr. Burgess.

Fortunately there was a large stock of dressings in the house, part of the Irish farmers' gift "earmarked" for the front. This supply was at once resorted to. Accommodation was soon available for 50 patients. The actual number received were 38—18 soldiers and 20 civilians. Two were dead when admitted, and one died after an operation.

The staff was deeply impressed by the masterful handling of the entire situation on the part of Dr. John Lumsden, the Chairman of the House Committee. Although his duties as Deputy Commissioner of the St. John Ambulance Brigade often required his presence elsewhere, he managed to be always at hand at critical moments.

On the 28th April, when there was heavy firing, attended with loss of life, near the City of Dublin Hospital, he proceeded into the firing line and dressed the wounded for several hours, some of whom were afterwards brought to this Dépôt.

After the reading of the report a hearty vote of thanks was passed to the distinguished surgeons and nurses who had given their services, and also to the emergency staff of the Dépôt for their successful efforts throughout the crisis.

A cheque for £1,260 from the Irish Farmers' Gift Day Sale Committee was handed in, and the warmest thanks of the Committee were tendered to them for their much-needed assistance and generosity.

DRUMCONDRA HOSPITAL.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of Drumcondra Hospital was held on 14th inst., A. Dawson, J.P., in the chair. Also present:—Rev. Fergus Greer, Dr. O'Keeffe Wilson, Mr. J. E. Robinson, Mr. P. A. Hay, and Mr. W. J. Arnold. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and signed, Judge Orr was appointed Chairman, and A. Dawson, J.P., vice-chairman, for the ensuing year. Messrs. A. Dawson, W. J. Arnold, and James Robertson were again appointed to act as a Finance Sub-Committee. The annually appointed medical staff were all re-elected. The finance statement was examined, and accounts amounting to £61 3/- passed for payment. Mr. J. E. Robinson was appointed visitor for the month. Sister Ennis was granted leave of absence for the duration of the war, having received an appointment in the British Red Cross Nursing Staff. Other routine business was transacted.

"OUR BOYS."—The special holiday number of Our Boys, which is now on sale, is sure to have a very large circulation. It is full of excellent reading. Much care has been taken in the selection of the short stories, which are interesting, and suitable for the juvenile readers, for whom they are intended. The illustrations are a feature of the issue, and both in number and variety they will make a wide appeal.

The Swansea bakers have decided to reduce the price of the 4lb. loaf from 9d. to 8½d., reductions to come into force next Monday.

CHURCH OF IRELAND.

Rev. Canon Dowse will preach at Morning Service and the Bishop of Derry at Evening Service to-morrow in Baggotrath Church in aid of the Asylum for Penitent Females.

An interesting function took place in the Parochial Hall, 20 Lower Dominick street, Dublin, on Thursday evening, when an illuminated address with cheque was presented to the Rev. A. G. Johnston, who had been organist of St. Mary's Parish Church for over twelve years, and was recently ordained for the curacy of St. Anne's Cathedral, Belfast. After tea, the Honorary Secretary of the Presentation Committee (Mr. J. J. Allen) read the address, and the Rector spoke of the high attainments of the recipient, and of the esteem in which the congregations and parishioners of both the parish church and chapel of ease held him, and referred with feelings of regret to the loss which his absence would cause. Mr. Johnston, in his reply, spoke of the kindness he had invariably received from the Rector and parishioners of St. Mary's, and of the loyal support he had had from the choir, the recollections of which he would ever cherish through life.

MARGUERITE OF NAVARRE.

Among the many remarkable women concerned in the shaping of the destinies of France few have attained greater celebrity than the talented sister of Francis I. British readers, it is true, sometimes confound her with her grand-niece, that other Marguerite, Queen of Navarre, the wife of Henry IV., and volatile daughter of Catherine de Medici. Yet the connection of the elder princess with English history is much closer than that of the younger, inasmuch as her hand was sought in marriage successively by Arthur Prince of Wales, by his father, the widower, Henry VII, and by the much married Henry VIII. But large as looms the figure of Marguerite d'Angoulême in the political history of her country, she occupies a no less prominent position in its literary annals. Le Myrouer de l'Ame Pécheresse is deserving of study in its relation to the tenets of the French Reformers, while her later work, the "Heptameron," cannot be overlooked in any history of French literature.

When Louisa of Savoy married the cadet of the House of Orleans, Charles Count of Angoulême, there seemed to be little likelihood of her children ever inheriting the crown of France. The descendants of his uncles, Charles VI. and Louis Duke of Orleans, presented a sufficient barrier against such a possibility; but with Charles VIII. ended the elder line, and with Louis XII. the Orleans branch of the House of Valois. Francis I. thus unexpectedly succeeded to the throne, which, two generations later, by the death, without male heirs, of his four grandsons, passed from the house of Valois to that of Bourbon, in the person of Henry IV. Yet, as we have seen, the eldest child of Louisa Countess of Angoulême did not want for suitors. Already her younger brother Francis was appreciably nearer in the royal succession by the death of Charles VIII., and not only England, but even Charles of Spain, sought the hand of the little sixteen-year-old princess. The King and his consort, Anne of Brittany, for political reasons preferred to wed Marguerite to Charles d'Alençon, first Prince of the Blood, a quasi-royal duke in his principality. The Duke, handsome, dull, and gloomy, formed no suitable mate for the gay and talented Marguerite, who took refuge from her loneliness, not in the gallantry depicted in the "Heptameron," but in the study of theology and the companionship of the Reformers.

The accession of her brother to the throne of France in 1515 gave to his elder sister a position of considerable influence, but the disastrous field of Pavia left Francis I. a captive in the hands of his great rival, Charles V. Much of the blame of the defeat was attached to the incapacity of the Duke d'Alençon, who returned to receive the reproaches of his wife and to die of a broken spirit. In this conjuncture Marguerite proved a tower of strength to her brother. She visited him in his Spanish prison, and conducted the inconclusive negotiations for his release. Finally, she hit on the plan of the abdication of the King in favour of his little son, the Dauphin Francis, under the regency of the Dowager Louisa, in the event of whose death the regency was to devolve on "notre très chère et très amée sœur unicque Marguerite de France."

Of her care of the royal children, of her second marriage to Henri d'Albret, King of Navarre, of the birth of her daughter, the celebrated Jeanne d'Albret, rival and victim of Catherine de Medici, and of the marriage of that daughter first to the Duke of Clères, and, on the dissolution of that marriage in 1545, to the handsome Antoine de Bourbon, Duc de Vendôme, space forbids us to speak. Those things will be found very fully and accurately set forth in Mr. H. Noel Williams's handsome volume. We have one serious fault, however, to find with the book. Many of us know the excellent biography of Margaret of Navarre, contributed to the "Eminent Women Series" by A. Mary F. Robinson (Madame Darmesteter). This work obtains only casual mention on pp. 354 and 356, but fuller recognition was surely due of Mr. William's undoubted debt to Madame Darmesteter's less pretentious monograph. A few parallel passages are sufficient to show what use has been made of the earlier production:—

"Margaret of Navarre"	"The Pearl of Princesses."
P. 31—"So we perceive, behind this mask of metaphors, a great and tangible effort: the endeavour to convert the Royal Family of France to the new ideas, to the wish for Reform."	P. 135—"Yes, even behind the mask of metaphor and allegory which so severely taxes the patience of the reader, one can perceive a great and tangible effort. The endeavour to convert François I. and Louise of Savoy to the New Ideas, to the ever-growing necessity of Reform."
P. 103—"She had left Paris, heavy-hearted, some weeks before, seeing, as it seemed, all her dreams of wide culture, beneficence and toleration crumble suddenly into nothing, and the old reign of darkness engulf the world once more."	P. 302—"Early in January, 1535, Marguerite set out on her journey to the South with a heavy heart, for it must have seemed to her as though all her dreams of culture, beneficence, and toleration had crumbled to nothing, and that France had returned to the gloomy fanaticism of the Dark Ages."
P. 107—"But Francis, though avenged, was not appeased. A horror of his own laxity was upon him."	P. 305—"The wrath of the King was not yet appeased, a horror of his own laxity seemed to be upon him."
P. 127—"But it was not because of Jeanne's desolation that the King desired to marry her. She was only a glove to fling down in the face of the Emperor . . ."	P. 334—"It was certainly not out of compassion for his little niece's unhappiness that François desired to marry her . . the marriage of the princess . . . would be like a glove thrown in that monarch's face."
P. 149—"To live a fortnight without pastime is an insupportable idea."	P. 362—"To spend nearly a fortnight without a pastime would be altogether insupportable."
P. 226—"Suddenly her mouth was drawn a little awry. Her physician seeing this, persuaded her to go indoors, and to bed. He lost no time in treating her: but the December night had chilled her through."	"Suddenly the Queen's physician . . observed that her mouth was drawn a little awry. He persuaded her to go indoors and to bed, and lost no time in treating her. But the biting air of the December night . . . had done its work."

The book has the advantage of an excellent index, and is illustrated by some interesting reproductions of contemporary portraits.

THE ROYAL WELSH FUSILIERS.

"The Story of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers" is another in the series of regimental histories which is being published by the Country Life Library, and well maintains its reputation. When William III. landed at Torbay in 1688 the Army, whose sympathies were with the mass of the people, ranged itself on his side. William was master of England, and James fled to Ireland. There was plenty of work to be done before the Army could be in fit condition to carry on a Continental war, and in the meantime James had Roman Catholic Ireland on his side, save a portion of Ulster. To Henry Lord Herbert of Cherbury William gave authority on March 17th to raise a regiment, and for this purpose brisk recruiting took place along the marches of Wales. By August the troops were considered ready for active service, and were embarked for Ireland under Schomberg. Recruits were plentiful, but there were few arms and little clothing. Schomberg complained that he found many regiments without muskets, and one at least without shirts. In addition to these troubles, the officers were lazy and inefficient, but exception is made of the Colonel of the 23rd Foot, who was assiduous, and was often the only officer with his regiment.

The camp at Dundalk was the grave of many; men died like flies. No result followed the campaign of 1689, but in the following year at the Boyne the regiment showed that its young soldiers were rapidly becoming first-class troops. In 1691 "Toby" Purcell was given command of "Ingoldsby's" Regiment, but this had wasted so greatly that it was fused with "Herbert's," which had also been greatly reduced, and thus Purcell probably became Major in the reformed 23rd Foot. At the battle of Aughrim the regiment distinguished itself and suffered most severely, losing 46 wounded and 32 killed; among the latter was the Colonel. Purcell then succeeded to the command, and his name continued as the regiment's for some time afterwards. To this day the 23rd still toasts "Toby" Purcell's spurs, though the spurs themselves were lost in 1842.

Louis XIV.'s policy of "France above all" had resulted in constant fighting in the Netherlands, and so we find the regiment in Flanders. Colonel Ingoldsby was in command, and it was known by his name. Under William in 1694 nothing much was accomplished, but in the following year came Namur, at which the regiment played a fine part. "No regiment was more fully employed or suffered more severely. . . . . The 23rd lost eleven officers killed and wounded; no other regiment lost more than five." Soon after this the regiment began to be called the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. After the peace of Ryswick it went to Ireland, and there it remained until 1701, when war broke out again, and Flanders once more became the cockpit. For a dozen years the British Isles were seen no more. Under Marlborough the regiment saw fighting at Blenheim, Ramillies, Malplaquet, and Oudenarde, and every battle brought fresh laurels. Mr. Tipping's description of Blenheim is admirable.

In 1713 the 23rd fought at Dettingen under Huske, and by its steady and effective platoon-firing helped to turn disaster into a lucky escape. It bore the brunt of the charge of the French cavalry, and, though broken through, rapidly reformed, and, facing inwards, poured death upon the intruders. At Fontenoy its behaviour was no less steady in the retreat than in the advance.

Since the Peace of Utrecht England had held Gibraltar and Minorca. To the latter the 23rd was sent to garrison Fort St. Philip. They were besieged by the French, and, despite a heroic defence, were forced to capitulate. With this unhappy affair the name of Admiral Byng is associated, but he was merely the incompetent servant of an incompetent Government. Again the regiment suffered more than any other, losing 28 killed and 90 wounded. Minden in 1759 must rank as one of the finest of the Royal Welsh's exploits. In company with the 12th and 37th, they marched straight upon 10,000 French horse, and so deadly was their firing, so steady the bearing of the men, that the Frenchmen broke before them. During the next fifty years the regiment saw service in North America; it was at Lexington and Bunker's Hill, New York and Philadelphia. Afterwards it was in the West Indies, Holland, Egypt, under Abercromby, and Denmark.

Hitherto there had been but one battalion, but now a second was raised for service in the Spanish Peninsula. The second was under Sir John Moore, the first under Wellington in Portugal. During 1808-1814 they were in nearly every engagement—Albuera, Badajoz, Salamanca, Vittoria, Pyrenees, Toulouse, and finally Waterloo, when they covered themselves with glory and lost their Colonel, Sir Henry Ellis. After the declaration of peace the regiment was reduced to one battalion, but in 1842 a second was again raised, and joined the first in Montreal. Amalgamated, they fought through the Crimea, and then set sail for service in China. At Cape Town news arrived of the Mutiny, and the regiment was diverted to India. At the relief of Lucknow three V.C.'s were gained. While the regiment was engaged in India a new second battalion was raised, which saw service with Wolseley in Ashantee, but, before it left, both battalions were in England together. Seven years later they celebrated St. David's Day at Woolwich. The first battalion fought in Burmah in 1885, and in 1889 celebrated the regiment's bicentenary at Lucknow. In 1899 it was in South Africa, and the following year saw the second battalion in China at Tientsin. Since the world war started twenty-three battalions have been raised. It is noteworthy that no regiment which, during by far the larger part of its career, has consisted of one battalion, has a list of "battle honours" as long as that of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

WAR WIRE.

The part which barbed wire has played in the war since its particular mention in Sir Ian Hamilton's despatches as "an invention of the devil" is now fully recognised by the public. Mr. Lynch, in this little book, for which he makes no greater claim than "blatant advertisement," impresses it on us more vividly than ever. That the Germans foresaw the value of barbed wire is evident from their ante-bellum provision of some 100,000 miles of it, far thicker than anything we had, and with barbs three times as close. Ours was intended for cattle, theirs for men. If a man could set out from the Belgian shore of the North Sea and make his way between the opposing armies, he might walk through a lane of barbed wire hedges on either hand through Flanders, Picardy, Artois, and Champagne, and over the heights of the Meuse into Lorraine and Alsace, till he reached the border of Switzerland, 500 miles away. Taking an aeroplane and flying eastward, he would see great stretches of wire among the mountains of the Trentino, and sporadic masses of it scattered through the Balkan Peninsula. Swerving north and coming to earth in Bukowina, he might find himself in another lane, along which he could tramp between the same forbidding hedges for 900 miles till he emerged on the shores of the Baltic Sea. This gives one some idea of war wire and its uses, but even this only conveys a fraction, for one must consider the acres of entanglement that stretch inwards, line succeeding line, for miles.

The descriptions of the battles of Festubert, Loos, Nancy, and the Gallipoli landings all show that failure—not absolute, but rather failure to accomplish all that might have been won—was due to the fact that the artillery had not succeeded in smashing a passage in certain parts of the line. We have seen how the Germans festooned the French entanglements before Verdun without accomplishing a decision. Mr. Lynch has invented a material impervious to barbed wire. Gloves, waistcoats, and blankets are made of it. The blankets can be thrown over the wire, and he claims that in this way progress can be made rapidly and with little danger from the barbs.

GERMAN POLICY.

Dr. G. W. Prothero has written an able book on German policy before the war. It holds nothing very novel for anyone who has followed the course of Berlin diplomacy during the last twenty-six years. The author plainly thinks that German intrigues in Morocco masked the design of making the Balkan States subservient to the Berlin-Byzantium-Bagdad plot. The diplomatists of William II. aimed at supremacy in the Near and Middle East. Using this as a key to the German policy, Dr. Prothero gives us an illuminating survey. Like all men who have a thesis to maintain, he does not lay sufficient weight on points adverse to it. Though there is much in the contention that domination in the Near and Middle East was the chief condition governing German intrigue, the designs on Morocco were more serious than Dr. Prothero is prepared to admit. Doubtless, the despatch of the Panther to Agadir was meant to cloak policy elsewhere, yet we cannot help thinking that the sending of this ship was designed ultimately as a pretext not only for a port, but also for a large share of African territory. It is now clear that in 1905 M. Delcassé was obliged to resign because war was threatened if he should refuse. Such a course was not permissible in 1911, for behind France there was then the might of the British Empire. William II. saw that the Entente was a great deal more than a mere paper agreement.

FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Mr. Everard Meynell's "Life of Francis Thompson" was first published in October, 1913, and in the December of that year it reached a second impression. Now it is issued as a new edition, uniform with that of the works of Francis Thompson. These facts speak plainly as to the value of the thoughtful work which Mr. Meynell has given us. In his biography we hear much about the poet, but the man is not forgotten. When we lay down these pages we feel that we know Thompson himself quite well. The place assigned to the poet seems to us far too high. There is a simple strain in Thompson—witness his poems on children. Here, indeed, the influence of Wordsworth is unmistakable. It is difficult to overrate the wonderful opening of "The Hound of Heaven," but it is equally difficult to forget some of his lapses from taste. The mystical strain in him was the deepest influence in his life.

Father Velimirovic's pamphlet on "The Soul of Serbia" has already reached a second edition. It incorporates much useful information, given with Slavonic passionateness. M. Zaleski gives a swift survey of "Landmarks of Polish History." In the introduction it is praised by Dr. Seton-Watson, one of the highest authorities in this country. "The Polish Question as an International Problem" gives a thoughtful account of the movements of a remarkable people, chiefly in the nineteenth century. As all these pamphlets are published at a most moderate price, and are all well written, no one can now say that he is without the means of understanding the position of affairs in either Serbia or Poland.

RECENT FICTION.

Mr. Hocking has adopted a significant phrase from the parable of the prodigal son for the title of his story. Rex Goodwin, however, was no prodigal—at least in estate and condition. He was rich and gay, and had troops of friends, and was engaged to the finest girl in the town. Nevertheless, he had points of contact with the celebrated waster. He was a spendthrift and idler, without inner resources, and given to selfish pleasure-seeking. One day something stirred within him. The folly and essential badness of his existence broke upon him suddenly, and the resolve took shape that he would find a nobler way. He let it go forth without contradiction that he was bankrupt, and then he disappeared, with five pounds in his pocket, and determined to make his living somehow in London. How he succeeded, though at sore pains, how he learnt sympathy with the great army of toilers, and, incidentally, how he won a girl of rare quality for his wife—the former young lady promptly jilted him after the supposed loss of his wealth—all this composes the substance of Mr. Hocking's story. There is no subtlety in the style, and he does not vex himself or his readers with problems, but he has written an interesting and wholesome tale.

We learn from "Two Generations" the madness of marrying in haste. George Murray, when young and foolish, allows a strained notion of honour to hurry him into marriage with his landlady's daughter—a clear-sighted damsel who has been "playing" him with this intent. The companionship of a narrow-minded shrew, whose weapon is incessant nagging, alters the young Don Quixote into a drinking wastrel. The author spares us nothing of the dingy home environment in which the children, Ted and Mabel, grow up. Mabel, despite her cleverness, is painfully like her mother, and Ted, in his turn, goes through the same domestic mill as his father has endured before him. Fortunately, he is made of sterner stuff.

Mary is a lovable character, with an undercurrent of common-sense that is frequently latent in American women. It appears on the surface when she supplements a diminished income by letting the "Tower Rooms" in her old home to Roger Poole. This step, of course, does not earn the approval of her friends in Washington, and is looked upon as further "contrariness" by her undesired suitor, red-headed Peter. The story relates, without over-much sentiment, the fresh hope and energy which Mary's inspiring influence gives to the "lodger's" broken life—the sympathy of a good woman is all that is required to rouse him from the apathy of despair.

Miss Colburn Mayne has made an interesting study of young womanhood in the 'sixties in her story of Millie North. Millie, longing for a "career," and intolerant of family interference, belongs indisputably to the twentieth century; but, having been born several decades before her time, she is looked upon as something of a freak in her own social and domestic circles. Even her music, for which she has genius, is merely a disturbing element to her dense and unappreciative contemporaries. Having, therefore, kicked against the pricks in vain for a period, she bows to convention, and consents to marry the young man who has waited for her.

PLATFORM AND STAGE.

Mr. Somerset Maugham's play, "The Land of Promise," will pay a visit to the Gaiety Theatre next week, with Miss Evelyn Ormonde in the principal part. Miss Ormonde is well known in Dublin, where she has already made a hit in "Bunty Pulls the Strings" and other pieces. In the present piece she undertakes the rôle of Norah Marsh, a part created in London by Miss Irene Vanbrugh. "The Land of Promise" has proved a great success since it was produced at the Duke of York's Theatre, London, in 1914, and is now nearing the hundredth consecutive week of its tour.

The programme for the Hippodrome season at the Theatre Royal next week is an attractive one. The principal engagement is that of Chung Ling Soo, the conjuror, in a performance full of Oriental mystery. He will be assisted by Miss Soo Seen and a large staff of Chinese. The entertainment will be divided into three parts. Other variety "turns" include Monte McVean, a Scotch character comedian; Mdlle. Chevalier and Captain Reigo; Frank le Dent, juggler; E. M. Spate, American entertainer; Mazuz and Mazette, comedy eccentrics; and Miss May Henderson, "the Dusky Comedy Queen." There will be a special matinée on Saturday at 2.30.

J. Leicester Jackson and Charles Mepham's company will appear at the Queen's Theatre next week in Frank M. Thorne's domestic drama, "Her One Great Sin," which will be played twice nightly and at a Saturday matinée. The piece is in eight scenes, and Miss Blanche St. Albans will appear in the principal part.

Scotch Kelly is to pay a return visit to the Empire Theatre next week. He will be remembered for his very successful comedy work in the Empire Christmas pantomime of "Cinderella." In addition, the company includes Conway and Leland, "the Merry Monopedes," who claim to give the only act of its kind in the world; Jock McPhearson, the Caledonian jester; the Three Macs and Casey; Wallace and Lorn; Massona, the comedy juggler; Lily May, and the Paceys.

The feature of the Tivoli programme for next week is the engagement of Charles Cohan, the Hebrew comedian. The Cadillos will make their first appearance in a comedy wire act; and there are also Warrinder, the violinist; Renee Miller, Wilson and Ernie, Barnes and Lea, in a musical comedy sketch; Hayman and Lowe, in a new burlesque comedy scena; and Scott Richards, the operatic basso. The Tivoli bioscope will give a display of pictures.

At the Bohemian Picture Theatre tomorrow, in addition to an exceptionally long programme of pictures, solos will be given by Signor Simonetti and Mr. Clyde Twelvetrees. Signor Simonetti will play in the afternoon the traditional Irish song, "The Coulin." Monday's principal picture is the racing play, "His Last Dollar." On Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday Mr. Clyde Twelvetrees will play "Kol-Nedrie."

An event of interest is announced for Monday afternoon, 26th June. Messrs. C. Rawdon Briggs and Edward Isaacs, who are coming to Dublin to conduct the annual examinations of the Leinster School of Music, are holding a joint recital. Mr. Briggs is already known here as a member of the Brodsky Quartette, and as Examiner in the Violin at the Feis Ceoil competitions. Mr. Isaacs is a pianist and composer of exceptional attainments. He won the Sir Charles Hallé Memorial Scholarship, and has been solo pianist at the Hallé Concerts. His Concerto for pianoforte and orchestra, of which he played the solo part at Sir Henry Wood's Queen's Hall Concerts, was the foundation of his popularity as composer.

THE ROYAL CITY OF DUBLIN HOSPITAL.

By kind permission of the Council of the Royal Dublin Society, a violin recital was given by Mrs. J. G. Burnett (Helen Irvine) in the theatre of the Society on Wednesday, 31st ult., at 4 o'clock. Admission was, as usual, free. After the recital, a collection was taken at the door of the exit, in aid of "The Edith Cavell Irish Memorial Bed," for the Royal City of Dublin Hospital. A large and representative audience was present, and fully enjoyed the musical treat afforded them. Mrs. Burnett was accompanied at the piano by her husband and both have already raised several hundreds of pounds for war charities.

The Board of Directors of the Royal City of Dublin Hospital, at their last meeting, recorded with pleasure the receipt of £21 17s. 3d. as the net result of the recital, and desire to express their indebtedness to Mr and Mrs. Burnett for their great kindness in providing the entertainment.

The grateful thanks of the Board are also due to Lady Hawtrey Benson, who carried out the main work of organisation, and to the following, who kindly assisted as collectors, etc., during the performance:—Lady McGrath, Mrs. Doyly Battley, Miss Ida Elsner, Mrs. Thompson, the Misses Thompson, Miss Thompson, Mrs. Pilkington Wilson, Miss E. A. Eddison, Mr. Hazzard, and Mr. G. Jameson Johnston, F.R.C.S.I. To the Council of the Royal Dublin Society, the directors of the hospital also tender their very best thanks.

The proceeds of the above recital have been handed to the Committee of the Edith Cavell Irish Memorial, and will be added to the amount already collected, for the purpose of endowing a bed in the above hospital in memory of Edith Cavell, who heroically gave her life for her country. Subscriptions to this memorial should be sent to the Hon. Secretaries, "Edith Cavell Irish Memorial Fund," 30 Molesworth street, Dublin, or to Miss E. A. Eddison, at the hospital.

The recent rebellion has added considerably to the liabilities of the hospital, owing to the difficulty of procuring a reserve supply of food and dressings for so many as two hundred additional patients within a week, and as the hospital is at present some £6,000 in debt contributions either to the above project or to the general funds of the hospital would be most gratefully acknowledged.

DANTE AND BOETHIUS.

SECOND DONNELLAN LECTURE

BY BISHOP BOYD CARPENTER.

Bishop Boyd Carpenter delivered the second of his Donnellan lectures on Dante to a large audience yesterday afternoon in Trinity College, Dublin. As the Divinity Theatre in the Museum building was not large enough to seat all who wished to hear the discourse of the learned and eloquent prelate, the Provost announced to the gathering that the third lecture would be delivered on Monday afternoon in Professor Young's chemistry theatre at the end of the College Park. He added that they would remember that the Bishop would preach in the College chapel on Sunday morning, and asked as many as possible to sit in the body of the chapel.

Bishop Boyd Carpenter said that his purpose that afternoon was to illustrate Dante's appreciation of the work and character of Boëthius. There was not much to be said for the theory that Dante imitated the design of the "Consolations" of Boëthius when he wrote his Vita Nuova, because the custom of mixing prose and verse was simply the old custom which had been adopted by the Provençal poets, and was kept up by Dante. In the case of the "Consolations" poetry sprang out of the prose; but in the Vita Nuova the prose was used to explain the verse. Transplanting ourselves to the tenth canto of the Paradiso, we found the doctors of the Church, the teachers of mankind, assembled in the fourth heaven. Twelve names were brought together, and Thomas Aquinas became the spokesman of the group. Amongst them you found Boëthius. Why did Dante group those men together? The presence of Solomon must be a puzzle to many. The explanation might be that Solomon was a great teacher; but there was a better reason still. The thought in Dante's mind was the thought of what the world desired to know concerning love, and what the world desired to know concerning love was to have a spiritual explanation of the Song of Solomon, and Dante realised that there was a depth of musical meaning within the pages of that song. What was the position of Boëthius among the men? Boëthius, it might be said, was a learned doctor of the Church, and also a martyr to the Christian faith. Neither of those statements could be wholly accepted; yet whatever else were true, the flavour of the book upon which the fame of Boëthius rested was much more in harmony with the teachings of Marcus Aurelius than with those of an erudite father of the Church. To Boëthius Dante gave the most conspicuous place among those worthies. He reminded us that Boëthius looked upon the world as a man who had tasted its joys and found them all vain; that his spirit had found release through the gate of martyrdom to climb up into the skies. Dante here struck the note which was so dominant in his writings. He found strength and consolation from the study of Boëthius, not only as a young man of twenty-five, but when he had passed his fiftieth year. He found in him not merely a passing, but a permanent, strength in life.

WHO WAS THE TEACHER?

Touching a question which had a curious interest for many admirers of Dante, the lecturer said that in the Inferno, where Dante had his interview with Francesca, Francesca used words which went straight to the hearts of human beings: "There is no greater sorrow than, in the days of grief, to recall our happy moments"; and she added: "This is a truth your teacher knows well." Now, who was the teacher? Immediately the commentators came to the conclusion that Francesca was referring to Vergil. But there was a certain amount of truth in the argument of a recent commentator that the teacher referred to was none other than Boëthius; for there was a phrase in this writer which expressed the same thought. Dante, too, believed that there was a strong current of mere conventionalism in the world, that a man was estimated, not by his inherent value, but by the conditions and circumstances under which he appeared at any given moment of his life. That was the complaint Dante made; it was also the complaint Boëthius made.

One of the points to which the Bishop confined himself in the latter portion of his lecture was of particular interest to readers of Bergson's philosophy. Bergson asked us to remember that, when we were dealing with questions, we were continually substituting quantitative values of our intellect for the qualitative impressions of our consciousness. We were always inclined to measure them in terms of time and space. But we should get rid of that, said Bergson. Boëthius had the same complaint; similarly with Dante. These two writers were both together in yearning for that which should be unconditioned by time and space. At the present day you could not look at the carnage which was going on all around without feeling somehow or another that poor human beings were in the embrace of some huge boa-constrictor, from which they could not escape. There was a strong tendency for people to find their thoughts paralysed, and the very free-will itself became paralysed with the paralysis of their thoughts. They wanted that wholesome principle in their minds lest they should become paralysed by the speculative aspect of things. The practical aspect of things brought them back to truth; and that was the aspect in which both Boëthius and Dante dealt with the question. They set before themselves and the world the idea of free-will. Boëthius affirmed that a creature could not be rational unless he was endowed with that faculty. To keep the spirit of our manhood unmoved either by the prosperity which smiled upon us to-day or the adversity which befell us to-morrow, was to keep our manhood not only dignified and strong, but the simplicity of our Christian faith humble and trustful as it ought to be. (Applause.)

BISHOP BOYD CARPENTER.

The Provost of Trinity College asks us to state that Bishop Boyd Carpenter's lecture on Monday next, at 4 p.m., will be given in the larger lecture room of Professor Young in the Chemical School, which is part of the Medical School building at the east end of the College Park. Visitors will find the Lincoln place gate the most convenient gate for approaching this larger theatre.

CORK STREET FEVER HOSPITAL AND HOUSE OF RECOVERY.

The Managing Committee held their usual meeting in the Boardroom of the hospital on Thursday, the 15th June, 1916, at 9 o'clock a.m., Edgar A. Pim in the chair.

There were also present:—John P. McKnight, William R. Wigham, Edgar Anderson, M.A.

The present state of the House was reported as follows:—

		Beneavin.
No. of Patients in Hospital on the 30th April, 1916	173	16	189
Admitted during the month of May, 1916	174	21	195

				254
Remaining in Hospital on the 31st May, 1916	121	9		130

The accounts for supplies to the hospital during the month were examined and paid.

The Medical Superintendent reported that the numbers admitted were only 174, showing the absence of any epidemic in the city. Scarlatina showed a decided falling off in numbers, as also did measles. The chief contributors to the admissions were rubella and diphtheria, and also pneumonia. A large number of sick soldiers also passed through our wards, chiefly septic sore throats.

Messrs. Edgar Anderson and John P. M'Knight were appointed Visiting Governors for the current month.

After the transaction of the necessary business the Board adjourned.

The Managing Committee thankfully acknowledge the following subscriptions and donations received during the past month:—

GOLFING NOTES.

Amongst the names of officers honoured for achievements in the field of battle appears that of Captain J. D. MacCormack, R.A.M.C., who will be remembered by golfers as the crack Hermitage player. Captain MacCormack was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous conduct. His elder brother, Doctor C. G. P. V. MacCormack, R.A.M.C., was severely wounded at Ypres in July, 1915; and his younger brother, who was gazetted to the Connaught Rangers and attached to the Royal Flying Corps, has been invalided home. All three brothers are proficient golfers, but Captain J. D. MacCormack gave promise of achieving the highest fame.

Though he has yet to win a championship, his performances on such courses as Hermitage and Little Island, Cork, on both of which he played a good deal, stamp him as a player capable of doing great things when he strikes his best game. Few players developed such keenness for the game as he, and at the championship held at Hermitage during the opening days of the war he was one of the favourites for the event, but was beaten by his clubmate, Mr. J. Nugent. He had not then acquired that temperament essential for the winning of championships, which can only be gained by constant play in big tournaments; but, when on his game, Captain MacCormack could put up a stiff fight with any player.

The exhibition matches played by Vardon and Ray at Queen's Park course, Bournemouth, on Saturday last for war fund purposes provided a rare treat for the many followers of the games. Bournemouth is one of the principal health resorts in the South of England, and is at present crowded with convalescent soldiers, and a large number of these men followed the play. At the conclusion of the matches the clubs and balls used by the professionals, together with signed autograph score cards, were sold by auction, and realised £44 for the fund. Colonel Hall Walker and Mr. H. B. Norton were the principal buyers.

The morning round was a four-ball match, the professionals being associated against two local amateurs, Messrs. A. W. Murray and R. Lamplough, who received a start of 4 up. The contest was characterised by fine driving by Vardon and Ray, the latter especially hitting a long ball. The putting was somewhat affected by the greens not being in the best of condition, but some wonderful scores were done. For instance, Vardon got down in 3 at the twelfth, a bogey 5 hole of 367 yards, and holing a 16ft. putt at the fourteenth, Ray had a 2. The amateurs, who were beaten by 2 up, did not win a hole in the round.

There should have been a medal round in the afternoon between Vardon and Ray, but instead another four ball match between the same players as in the morning was played, the amateurs this time receiving 4 bisques. Vardon and Ray played even better under these conditions, and brought the match to a close at the fourteenth hole, where they were 5 up.

The match arranged to be played at Mid-Surrey on this day week between Vardon and Taylor and Braid and Herd reminds one of the great foursome which the same professionals engaged in over four greens in 1905. Few matches aroused the same interest as this foursome, which at one stage underwent an extraordinary change. It was at Troon that Braid and Herd lost a lead of two holes, and thenceforward became so completely demoralised as eventually to find themselves 12 down. Not many people except those who followed the game knew what difficulties the Scotsmen played under on that occasion. Braid was taken ill, but like a good sportsman asked that no reference should be made to the fact Herd was suffering from a swollen leg, and with him the mere task of walking was a difficulty. Neither made any complaint, but cheerfully made the best of what, for them, was a very serious defeat.

It is not generally known that the late Lord Kitchener was a golfer. He began playing soon after the South African War, at the same time when General Botha also fell a victim to the charms of the game. As was only natural in the case of a man beginning golf so late in life, he did not achieve any great success, but as in all other matters he studied the game in a thorough manner. Had he given more time to practice, no doubt he would have developed into a good player, as no man could have been more painstaking in his attempts to master the use of the various clubs, but he did not consider that too much time should be devoted to any game, no matter how much enjoyment was derived from playing it.

SPORTING NEWS.

PHŒNIX PARK MEETING—THIS DAY.

There is promise of excellent racing on the occasion of the June Meeting at Phœnix Park, where a very attractive programme will be submitted. The ground is in splendid order, and with a large number of horses due to meet their engagements the sport should prove brisk and interesting. The entries are exceptionally numerous, and big fields are pretty certain to contest the various events, of which the Blake Plate is the most valuable. Behan holds a strong hand in this race with Ossory, The Pile, and Ailna to represent the stable, and of the others Orlass and Lady Evie boast the best public credentials, the latter of this pair having scored over this track in April, while Orlass was seen in winning form at Baldoyle on Monday. For the winner I shall rely on

THE PILE.

Other selections are as follow:—
Kilbride Plate—Half Caste or Percival Keene.
Liffey Bank Plate—Geraldina or Banshee.
Weight for Age Plate—Guenoc or Risky.
Welter Plate—Mr. Arnott's selected.
Ashtown Plate—Blackcap or Strolling Saint.

LIMERICK MEETING—YESTERDAY.

The second day's racing at Greenpark was favoured with the same delightful conditions as prevailed on Thursday, and again the sport was up to a good standard of excellence. Nearly all the runners for the Garryowen Plate were backed, but most money was for Bonmahon and Eidelweiss. The latter of this pair made the best showing, and at the entrance to the straight looked like scoring, but Fanatic easily got the better of her at the distance, and won comfortably. Royal Band, the favourite for the Railway Plate, was somewhat lucky to score, as Navan Lass, who finished second, only beaten by a head, was slow away from the gate, and only got on fighting terms with the leaders when it was too late to make up the ground and in another stride she would likely have beaten the favourite. Hill of Camas gave further proof of what a genuine steeplechaser he is by winning the June Plate from eight runners. Bachelor's Flight, who was shouldering 12st. 4lb., put up a game struggle, and finished second, but there was never any doubt as to Hill of Camas beating him. Despite the fact that there were eighteen runners for the Welter Plate Equipoise was backed down to 6 to 4. The son of Bachelor's Button never threw out any hope to his supporters, and the race fell to the outsider, Rathrue, who beat the top weight, Closheen, in a fine finish by a short head. Rathrue was ridden by Mr. J. F. Tuthill, and this was that gentleman's first success in a flat race. Never Fear made amends for his Leopardstown failure by winning the Munster Plate in easy style. He jumped in flippant style on this occasion, and, though challenged several times in the straight by Dundesert, held the other at bay to the end, and his success was very welcome to backers, most of whom had supported him. Details:—

PATRIOTIC PLATE AT BALDOYLE.

The Race Declared Void.

The following appeared in last night's sheet Calendar:—

The Stewards of the Turf Club investigated the objection lodged by Mr. Peard, the owner of Trevisco, against the Patriotic Plate being declared to have been a race, on the grounds that the horses were started before the advertised time (which objection was referred to them by the Stewards of the Metropolitan (Baldoyle) Race Meeting), and decided that the race was null and void.

"GYMKHANAS."

The Stewards having read a memorial signed by several trainers and jockeys in relation to so-called gymkhanas, which were stated to have been held in the course of the year 1915 at Newbridge, Edenderry, and Enfield, which gymkhanas appear to have partaken very closely of the nature of unrecognised meetings, and to have lent themselves to the commission of fraudulent practices, the Stewards desire to express their strong disapproval of the action of several trainers and jockeys in taking part in these above-named gymkhanas, and thus imperilling their status on the Turf, and at the same time decide that persons and horses which took part in the gymkhanas at Newbridge, Edenderry, and Enfield in 1915 do not incur the penalty of disqualification under Rule 180 (ii.) and 66.—"Irish Racing Calendar."

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate (changed August 8, 1914) ... 5 p.c.

As was foreshadowed yesterday, the Bank of England yesterday morning advanced the rate for Treasury bills of all dates to 5 p.c. Previously the rate for three months' bills had been 4½ p.c., and for six and nine months' bills 4⅞ p.c. The yearly bills were 5 p.c., and, therefore, unchanged. The action of the authorities is supplemented by an offer of 4⅞ p.c. by the Bank of England for fresh deposits in order to reduce the floating supplies of capital. Discount rates were marked forward again beyond Thursday's advance, but there was not much [illegible]. Only a moderate business in Treasury bills was reported at the central institution, and purchases undoubtedly rushed to secure lines of bills recently, anticipating the advance which has taken place. As the advancing of the official rates gives a profit on bills which were sold at lower quotations, it seems that re-sales of Treasury paper in the open market will tend to increase. There was an effort to make the rate for call money 4 p.c., but the quotation came down to 3½ p.c. Weekly loans were quoted at 4 to 4½ p.c. Nearly half a million was disbursed in dividends, mainly in bank shares. The New York exchange was steady at 4.76⅞.

There was a rally of ⅛d. to 30⅛d. per oz. in the price of spot silver on moderate Mint buying and a cessation of sales on Chinese account.

The Bank of England announced that £7,000 in sovereigns had been taken for export to the United States, and that £100,000 had been released from Egyptian account.

LONDON STOCK MARKETS IRREGULAR.

CONSOLS LOWER.

HESITATION IN HOME RAILS.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, FRIDAY.

The good war news, and confident expectations that yet better developments will shortly be reported from both of the main fighting fronts, prevent the Stock markets from slipping back into a condition of dulness and inertia. Business during the week has been on a larger scale than for fully a twelvemonth, but something of a lull is now beginning to become apparent in most departments, and the general aspect of the House is irregular, with moderate healthy reductions here and there. The gilt-edged market lacked stability to-day, and quotations tended downward. This was largely owing to the action of the Bank of England in advancing Treasury bill rates, together with other steps for stiffening up the Money market. These measures naturally react unfavourably upon the investment groups on the Stock Exchange, since they suggest that funds will be employable to better advantage outside the House than for some little time past. Home Rails were fairly firm, but they turned hesitating on advances. Conditions in the American market remained dullish, reflecting Wall street uneasiness regarding the Mexican and the railroad labour outlook. In the Foreign market, Allied Bonds preserved a confident appearance. Russian and Japanese quotations lost most of a forenoon improvement. Mines were checkered, while specialities in the Shipping group were active and fairly firm, and there was a fresh advance in Marconis. Indian Government issues were dull on the poor monsoon forecasts, but prices were protected by the minima.

There were mixed changes of ⅛ to ½ in the Colonial group, but purchases rather predominated.

RUSSIANS NOT SO STRONG.

In the Foreign market, Russians closed under best, but the Fours held a net gain of ½. Portuguese Bonds were marked 1¾ higher on a single transaction. Japanese quotations were spottily active and firm. Chinese Securities were strong on the brightening political outlook reported from Peking.

HOME RAILS IRREGULAR.

Home Rails finished with an irregular appearance. There was light support for Prior Charge Stocks, but prices showed no material change. Among junior descriptions the Heavies showed to best advantage. Gains predominated. Undergrounds were steady to dull. Scotch Stocks marked some variations of ⅛ to ¼ either way.

AMERICANS LOWER.

Americans continued off colour. Opening parity prices were lower in a great majority of cases, and the local market showed no rallying power, although small lots of Common Shares continued to change hands fairly briskly. In the face of labour and Mexican fears, and the continued uncertainties of the Presidential election campaign, Wall street remains conservative, with business almost exclusively in the hands of professionals. The general list showed many net falls averaging ½.

CANADIANS DULL, MEXICANS BETTER.

Canadian Pacifics were moderately higher at one time, but they turned easier, and closed ⅞ down at 184⅜. Grand Trunk Stocks were without pronounced tendency, and business was slow.

Mexican Rails were inactive and colourless, but Argentine Rails, which made a dull commencement, became brighter in the afternoon, concluding with gains of ¼ to ½ in a majority.

LONDON MINING MARKET INACTIVE.

There was an absence of pronounced activity in the Mining market, and conditions remained irregular. Kaffirs were steady to dull, but, on the whole, midsummer dividend announcements have helped the tone. Diamonds did not meet much attention, but were inclined to harden here and there. Rhodesians sagged in places from neglect. As regards base metal shares, the further fall in copper and tin prices had an adverse effect. Copper weakened £5 per ton and tin £2 15/- per ton. There was fresh support for Russian Shares, but the group did not close at the best of the day.

FURTHER RISE IN MARCONIS.

Shipping securities remained fairly active in the Miscellaneous group, but prices were irregular. Royal Mails held around 120; P. and O. Def. fell 1. Furness Withys were barely steady at 50/-. Marconis rose to 50/6. Bank Shares were good, the Metropolitan group being stiffened by the prospects of dearer money. Brazilian Tractions were offered back ⅜. Mexican Light and Power gave way to 19⅞. In the Land group Hudson's Bays recovered ⅛. Forestals were 1/- higher. There were some small mixed changes elsewhere. Kynochs reacted to 37/3. British Oil and Cake Mills were finally 9d. better. Supply descriptions were uninteresting, but Maypole Dairy Def. rose 1/- to 22/9.

The steamers are also covered against war risks. The directors who this year retire by rotation are Mr. Samuel S. McCormick, J.P., and Mr. Robert Goodbody. They are both eligible, and offer themselves for re-election. The auditors, Messrs. Stokes Bros. and Pim, also retire, and offer themselves for re-election. The Ordinary shareholders had been returned 35/- per share, and he proposed to pay a further 4/- immediately. He would not venture upon a prediction regarding the final outcome.

NORTH CAUCASIAN OILFIELDS, LTD.—The gross earnings of the company in Russia for 1915, so far as present advices show, have not been less than for the year 1914, but having regard to the recent imposition of an excess profits duty in Russia raising the total charge on this company's taxable profits in that country to 50 per cent., and the heavy British charge for income tax and excess profits duty for the year 1914 and the year under review, the directors are unable to make any announcement as to a final dividend until the definite accounts are received from Russia about the middle of July.

OIL SHARES QUIET.

Oil Shares were hesitating, but, while prices fluctuated narrowly, they recorded few important net changes. North Caucasians were unchanged, and the official announcement that owing to the war having delayed the completion of accounts the dividend could not be declared before next month.

MARKET REPORTS.

GRAIN.

DUBLIN CORN EXCHANGE, June 16.

Weather brilliant, but still cool for season, with east wind. Grain markets all round continue in a distinctly collapsible state, and very little business during the week was practicable in any branch. In fact, merchants show a decided disinclination to embark on new business in present position of things. Following recent heavy falls in wheat, the markets close the week with a further accentuated shrinkage in values, particularly for reds, which were more directly affected by the continued fall in American prices, besides lower Atlantic freight terms. Flour markets also favour buyers. Maize experiences an extremely dull inquiry, and apart from French purchases there is little to report in La Plata cargoes, leaving prices nominal, but lower American freight rate has eased terms a full 6d. on States corn. La Plata parcels, however, show sharp depression on London and Liverpool markets, whilst there is a great divergence between views of buyers and sellers at the moment as to covering prices of c.i.f. contracts. Our Corn Market to-day was poorly attended, and very little business transpired, whilst trend of values followed in the wake of leading cross-Channel distributing centres. Foreign wheat, 3d. per barrel lower. Foreign flour, 1/- per sack down. Maize another 1/- per quarter cheaper. Indian meal correspondingly cheaper. Irish wheat nominal. Oats neglected and easier; tip-top blacks, perhaps, 18/- to 18/3 and whites 20/-. Bran and pollard continue to favour buyers.

Following are the quotations:—Irish Produce.—Oats (per 196lb.)—Black oats, 18/- to 18/6; whites, 19/6 to 20/6. Oatmeal (per 112lb.)—Pinhead, 21/- to 21/6; flakes, 21/- to 21/6. Flour (per 112lb.)—Patent, 19/- to 19/6; firsts, 19/- to 19/6; seconds, 19/-. Pollard, coarse, 10/6 to 10/9. Bran (per 112lb.)—White, 10/6 to 11/-; red, 10/6 to 11/-.

Foreign Produce.—Wheat (per 280lb.)—Blue stem, 34/6; Walla Walla, 34/3; Manitoba, 33/6. Maize (per 480lb.)—Plate, 50/- to 50/6. Flour (per 280lb.)—American winter patent, 44/- to 46/-; straight clear, 42/- to 44/-; American spring patents, on spot, 44/- to 46/-; straight fancy, 42/- to 44/-. Canadian and Manitoba, 43/- to 48/-. Canadian oatmeal (per 280lb.)—Pinhead, 18/- to 19/-; flake, 19/- to 19/6. Indian meal (per 112lb.)—White, 11/9 to 12/-; coarse, 10/6 to 10/9. Yellow, 13/6 to 13/9; bruised, 13/6 to 13/9.

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES (BALTIC), Friday.—WHEAT—Cargo trade quiet, but depressed. Steamers of choice white Karachi, afloat, sellers, 60/-; May-June, 57/6; blue stem and white Walla from Pacific west, 60/-; ditto, June, also July, from Atlantic ports, 56/-; Rosafe, 63lbs., afloat, 56/-; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, June, 51/. Parcels firm, but closed easier. No. 1 Northern Manitoba, afloat, sold 48/-; tenderable 47/6, 46/6 untenderable; July-August, 48/- to 47/6; August-September, 48/6 to 48/-. BARLEY largely nominal; sailer of superior Californian brewing, August, sellers 61/-, and a steamer Karachi, July-10th August, 49/6, Bristol Channel. MAIZE lower to sell; steamers of yellow La Plata on passage, sellers, 51/-; ditto loading, also July, 50/-; sailers of ditto on passage, also loading, 50/-; South African, afloat, 48/. Parcels easier; La Plata, afloat, sold 44/6; May-June, 41/6 to 41/-; June-July, 41/3 to 40/6; July-August, 41/- to 40/6.

MARK LANE, Friday.—WHEAT—English wheat dull, and prices weaker. Whites delivered up range to 50/-, reds 50/- per qr., 504lbs. Foreign grades flat. No. 1 Northern Manitoba, 51/6 landed; No. 2, 50/6 landed. FLOUR easier. Canadian exports patents, 44/- to 45/- landed. Minneapolis 1st patents, 45/- upwards; No. 1 Town Households, 44/-. GRINDING BARLEY dull. American, 42/- landed; Plate, 43/6 landed. OATS flat. Plate, 29/6 landed. MAIZE lower. Plate, 43/- landed. Grain arrivals this week:—English—Wheat, 440; barley, 326; malt, 5,150; oats, 150; maize, 930 qrs. Irish—Oats, 850 qrs. Foreign—Wheat, 146,750; barley, 27,560; beans, 2,040; peas, 1,570 qrs.; flour, 17,570 sacks.

LIVERPOOL, Friday.—American advices were better than expected, and c.i.f. parcels of wheat were the turn dearer at the outset, but freights from thence were again easier and millers' demand poor, which caused free offerings, and prices gave way to 4½d. per quarter below last night. Maize in forward positions weak under pressure to sell, and prices 6d. to 1/- per quarter lower.

WHEAT on the spot slow of sale; prices showed a decline of 2d. to 4d. per cental from Tuesday's market rates. MAIZE—Spot parcels were more freely offered at 3d. to 4d. per cental decline from last market day, but River Plate attracted more attention at the lower prices. FLOUR quiet and favoured buyers for most descriptions, but late prices repeated. BEANS, BARLEY, and OATS were dull and favoured buyers. PEAS and OATMEAL steady and unaltered. WHEAT CARGOES neglected. In parcels, No. 1 Manitoba, July-August, sold at 47/3 to 46/9 per quarter. MAIZE CARGOES inactive. Parcels yellow River Plate, loading, sold at 41/3, June-July 41/- to 40/9, July-August 40/3 to 40/- per quarter.

WAKEFIELD, June 16.—Very little business passing at prices slighly easier all round. English wheat is quoted at 18/6 to 19/- per load of 192lb.; foreign the turn down on the week. Oats, 32/6 to 34/- per quarter on rail. Maize 2/- per quarter easier. Other feeding stuffs firm, but slow.

DERBY, June 16.—The Whit week fair market bore quite a holiday appearance. Not many samples of local wheat on offer, and farmers mostly declined an offer of 50/-. Prices were 2/- less money as compared with last Friday. Oats unchanged. Wheat, 50/- to 53/-; barley, 60/- to 63/-; oats, 36/-.

CATTLE.

BIRKENHEAD, Friday.—There were 650 cattle on sale in the Birkenhead lairages to-day, and, with more buyers in attendance, a firmer trade was experienced, though values were without much alteration. Sheep were a poor trade on the week, while lambs met with a further fall in prices. Cattle, 1/1 to 11d.; both mutton and lambs, top price, 1/1 per lb., sinking the offal.

LIVERPOOL, Friday.—BACON—Advices, on the whole, from Chicago, with live hogs being again dearer, were encouraging to bacon holders here, while arrivals at this port, though showing a slight increase on imports for the past few days, appeared to have no influence. The upward tendency became more pronounced, and, with a fair demand for both Irish and fancy meats, prices of long clear middles were raised 1/- per cwt., while best brands of short backs showed an additional advance of 6d. per cwt. on yesterday's figures. Irish, Danish, and Canadian met an improved demand, and prices of the latter in some cases were the turn against buyers. SHOULDERS firm and more inquired for at 1/- per cwt. more money for New Yorks and square cuts, while picnics maintained late rates. HAMS moved freely into consumption owing partly to the continued fine weather, an advance of 1/- per cwt. being registered for American long and short cut, and a partial improvement of 1/- in extra skinless. LARD on the spot was still slow of sale, and, with easier Chicago prices, continued to tend downwards, especially for American refined. CHEESE remained quiet at about late rates for both finest States and Canadian. BUTTER trade was disappointing, though prices showed little material change. EGGS firm at the recent improvement in values.

ARMY COUNCIL AND BRITISH AND IRISH WOOL.

The Secretary of the War Office announces: (1.) With reference to the Army Council Order of the 8th June, 1916, prohibiting the purchase and sale of British and Irish wool of 1916 clip, inquiries have been made by representatives of the trade as to the position of raw skins and skin wools under the Order. The Army Council, therefore, desire to make the following announcement:—(1) No restriction is intended to be placed on the purchase and sale of raw sheep skins. (2) It is not desired to restrict the purchase and sale of the skin to the date of the Order. (3) Skin wool pulled after the date of the Order is subject to embargo.

General permission is, therefore, given to sell or deal in—(1) Raw sheepskins, and (2) skin wool pulled prior to 8th June, 1916.

The Army Council have arrangements under consideration for purchasing the whole of the 1916 clip. Consequently the usual provincial auction sales will not be held.

A Sydney telegram states that wool from Brisbane has been sold there. All descriptions realised extreme rates, and fresh records were established.
